

G. O. P. Will Shape Program To Present at Next Session
Republican Congressmen to Study 3 Major Topics
SEE ECONOMY
Plan Agriculture, Housing, Trade Pact Legislation

Washington—(P)—House Republicans aimed today to have a definite program on at least three major topics—housing, agriculture and reciprocal trade agreements—to present at the 1940 session of congress as alternatives to administration measures.

Minority leader Martin (R-Mass.) probably will appoint special committees in the near future to study each of the subjects and to draft legislation.

The housing question was among those selected for study, it was understood, because most members regard it as certain to be revived by the administration next year. Some senators expressed the opinion, however, that its companion bill, the lending measure which the house killed—would not be reoffered if business improves.

Included in Program
The reciprocal trade agreements subject was on the Republican list, it was said, because Martin included it in his 12-point "recovery program" announced last April. At that time, he called for creation of a special congressional committee to investigate the effect of the trade program on industry and agriculture.

Some Republicans were not optimistic about the chances of any party committee working out a solution to the farm problem. One member commented:

"It's not much trouble to get a plan, but getting one that will work and on which the various farm groups will agree is something else again."

Representative Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic floor leader in the house, took issue in a radio speech last night with a statement by Martin that the Republicans had accomplished 14 points during the session just ended.

See Spending as Issue
The Republicans have offered no substitute program," Rayburn said, "except to advocate a return to the old economic order of giving special privileges to the favored few at the expense of the underprivileged many."

"They have not sought to repeal the permanent and monumental acts by which the Roosevelt administration will be judged in time to come."

With only a handful of legislators left in Washington, there were indications that government spending again would be a major issue in the next congress. Economy-minded members predicted they would be able to effect substantial curtailments in federal appropriations.

Secretary Declares Governor Horner to Run for Third Term
Springfield, Ill.—(P)—Governor Henry Horner "is certainly going to run" for a third term, his secretary, Arthur P. O'Brien, said today.

Making the first definite prediction concerning the 1940 plans of the 60-year-old, ailing chief executive of Illinois, O'Brien added:

"There's no question about it. He's feeling fine and has shown steady improvement. He is much better since he went to Highland Park. I don't think he'll have any opposition."

Governor Horner was in seclusion in a private residence in Highland Park, Ill., where he went last week for a rest to complete his convalescence from a long illness.

If Governor Horner is elected a third time, he would be the first Democratic governor ever to win a third term in the state and the only governor ever to have three consecutive terms.

Free Advice. Who Wants It?
It is one thing to be overtaken by misfortune. It is quite another thing to let yourself be overwhelmed by it. The latter trouble usually comes to people who mistake their wishbone for their backbone. Or their emotions for their intelligence. Or mistake one faint attempt for a persistent endeavor. That's why consistency usually brings success to any classified want-ad in The Post-Crescent. This one gave good proof:

Engrosses Bill Providing Funds For State Agency
Senate Nears Final Vote On $49,500 for Credit Administration

Madison—(P)—The senate engrossed today, 17 to 11, a bill by Assemblyman Nicholas Bichler (D) Belgium, appropriating $49,500 annually for operating the farm and home credit administration until June 30, 1941.

Senator Philip Nelson (P) Maple, sought unanimous consent for a final vote, but Senator Maurice Coakley (R) Beloit, objected.

The administration, which has existed in one form or other since 1933 to assist needy farmers and home owners to obtain credit and without funds, has been without since last June 30.

Republican senators opposed the appropriation on the ground it was not warranted by the amount of work the agency had been doing.

Stricter Regulation
The senate passed and sent to the assembly a bill by its education and welfare committee providing for more strict regulation of the beauty parlor industry.

It would create a division of cosmetology within the state health department. The division would operate under a supervisor, a board of examiners and four inspectors, the costs to be paid by license fees. It would set up standards for shops, managers, operators, manicurists and apprentices and prohibit new itinerant licensees.

The senate concurred in and sent to Governor Hall a bill transferring examination of the state retirement system from the banking commission to the commissioner of insurance and passed a measure allowing actions to review income tax assessments to be started in other counties as well as Dane county.

Beet Weeder Is Drunken Driver
Jess Soldohn, 31, Chicago, Pleads Guilty to Two Charges

Jess Soldohn, 31, Mexican beet weeder who gave his address as Chicago, Ill., pleaded guilty of drunken driving when he appeared in municipal court of Judge Thomas H. Ryan this morning. He also pleaded guilty of operating a car without a driver's license.

Judge Ryan fined him $50 and costs on the drunken driving charge with an alternative of 60 days in the county detention camp and $5 and costs with an alternative of 10 days for not having a driving license. Notice of the conviction will be sent to the secretary of state. Soldohn indicated he would pay the drunken driving fine, and Judge Ryan said upon payment the $5 fine would be remitted.

The motorist was arrested after he ran his car off the road and tipped over a half mile south of Mackville Sunday evening. He was uninjured.

Man Recovering After Amputating Own Foot
Lorain, Ohio—(P)—Attendants at St. Joseph's hospital reported today that William Capps, 19, Negro of Somerset, Ky., who amputated his foot after it was crushed in a fall from a train, was in "good" condition.

After cutting off the foot at the ankle with a pocket knife, Capps fashioned a tourniquet from his clothing and made a pair of crude crutches from limbs of a nearby tree. Then he hobbled nearly a mile along the railroad tracks to Vermillion, Ohio, whence he was brought here in an ambulance.

Capps' foot was crushed by a car wheel when he slipped and fell from a freight train. It was nearly eight hours from the time of the accident until he reached the hospital.

Bombers 'Raid' England in Record Peacetime Aerial War Games; Prepare for Blackout

London—(P)—British anti-aircraft defenses were manned today against a make-believe "enemy" bombers raid in a spectacular prologue to full dress rehearsal of the nation's armed forces.

The raiders—500 of them—will operate from the south and east. One group of Royal Air Force planes playing the part of the enemy will fly over France tonight to wheel back from the vicinity of Beauvais, northwest of Paris. The rest will swoop in from the north sea.

Their jobs will be to dodge 800 defending planes, some 1,400 anti-aircraft guns and a barrage of 500 or so captive balloons designed to fend off bombing planes. It was estimated that about 60,000 men would take part in the exercise, which continues to Friday night. Observers will note the effectiveness of both the attackers and the defensive operations.

The climax of the aerial maneuvers will come with a blackout at 12:30 a. m. Thursday covering half of England, including London. Street lights and traffic signals will be snapped out and all-night restaurants and clubs darkened along with docks and railway stations. Trains and buses will operate with screened lights. A small army of air raid precautions forces will test the efficiency of their organization.

Along with the air war games is a program of sea maneuvers between the home fleet and the reserve fleet, which King George will review at Weymouth Wednesday. Land forces are similarly undergoing a vast training program which will reach a climax with one

Garner Glad to Get Away From Capital
Uvalde, Texas—(P)—Cactus Jack Garner, the nation's No. 2 man, was up early today to find out how his spacious grounds and poultry had fared during his extended sojourn in Washington.

He was interested, too, in where the fish were biting but he declined to give political angles even a tempting nibble about his views on governmental problems and his presidential possibilities.

"I'm mighty glad to get out of governmental affairs for awhile," the vice president told a small group of neighbors after he slipped into Uvalde.

Steel Pipe Breaks Loose, Leaves Trail Of Death and Injury
San Bernardino, Calif.—(P)—A six-ton section of steel pipe, slithering like a great snake down a steep mountainside to impale a vacationist's automobile, left a woman dead today, her companion and a workman gravely injured.

Killed in the freak crash was Mrs. Bess Arnold Ross, 46, Long Beach, Calif., clubwoman and social leader. She was crushed as the pipe, part of a gas main being laid in the mile-high resort of Crestline, broke through its fastenings and roared down the rocky, brush-covered slope yesterday.

Mrs. Ross' housekeeper, Anna McDonald, 25, lost a leg by amputation after the accident.

A workman, Henry Dutton of Los Angeles, was tossed 100 feet as the 1200-foot section struck him. Physicians said his back was broken and he may die. Grant Allison, 71, of San Bernardino, motoring by the scene, stopped to look at Mrs. Ross' mangled body and slumped over the steering wheel of his car, dead of a heart attack.

2 Members of Family Drown In Pine Lake

E. G. Billmeyer and Son, Kenneth, Clintonville, Victims

RECOVER BODIES

Father Makes Futile Attempt to Save Boy After Fall From Boat

Clintonville—Tragedy struck into the vacation of a Clintonville family about 4:30 yesterday afternoon when Edward G. Billmeyer, 41, and his 4-year-old son, Kenneth, drowned in Pine lake before the eyes of five other members of the family.

Kenneth was in a boat with his mother and two brothers, Robert, 6, and Jack, 7, when he tumbled in. The father dove in from a nearby raft and grabbed Kenneth. While swimming back to the raft with the child, both went under and did not come up. They were within several feet of the raft when they sank in 20 feet of water.

Two older sons, James, 15, and Tom, 12, and other vacationers made futile rescue attempts. The Clintonville fire department was summoned but was unable to give assistance as the father's body was not recovered until 9 o'clock, and the son's body at 9:40 last night.

Billmeyer was manager of the J. C. Penney store at Clintonville for the last 10 years. Previous to that time he was employed by the same firm at Wisconsin Rapids. He was a member of the Clintonville Rotary club, Knights of Columbus and the Holy Name society of St. Rose Catholic church.

Survivors are the widow and four sons. Billmeyer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Billmeyer, Wisconsin Rapids; two brothers, Paul, Wisconsin Rapids, and Victor, Waupaca; and a sister, Mrs. E. L. Zeaman, Stevens Point.

Funeral services for the two will be held Thursday morning at Wisconsin Rapids. The bodies are at the Heuer Funeral home.

TRUCKER KILLED

Milwaukee—(P)—Raymond Pontratz, 44, a Green Bay truck driver was killed last night when the heavy steel boom of a crane fell and crushed his skull.

Pontratz, employed by the Leicht Trucking company, came here to truck the crane to Manitowish. With the aid of Walter Barth of Oshkosh, who had been repairing the crane, Pontratz was loading the equipment onto a large flat trailer.

Pontratz placed planks at the back end of the trailer so the crane could be rolled into place. Barth started to swing the 50-foot steel arm. He saw Pontratz in the boom's path, and shouted a warning. As he shouted the boom fell.

The coroner's office said an inquest would be held late this week.

Gehrmann Says Congress Erred

Washington—(P)—Representative Gehrmann (P-Wis.) asserted that "a plague by congress" will plague every one of us when we get home."

That error, he said, was the provision in the work projects administration bill compelling a 30-day compulsory lay-off "regardless of need" for persons who have received WPA checks for 18 continuous months.

He told the house just prior to adjournment that he was "just commencing to find out" about the reception that he can be expected.

"I am afraid that we made a terrible mistake by writing into the law the compulsory lay-off," he said. "There are thousands in my district who absolutely have had no possible chance of finding private employment during the last several years. A great many of those who must be laid off now are heads of families with several children."

Gehrmann said he opposed the "furlough" and the elimination of the prevailing-wage provision.

Green Bay Planning to Expand Lake Frontage

Milwaukee—(P)—Four Green Bay park officials conferred with park officers here today, studying Milwaukee's acquisition of lake frontage and its development of outdoor swimming pools.

The Green Bay men said their city planned to expand its lake front holdings from 40 to 240 acres. They were M. G. Simond, park superintendent; Arthur Gatto, vice-president of the park board; Sylvester Esler, manager of the city's beach, and E. J. Perkins, council representative on the park board.

Made Cars Possible, Refuses to Own One

Pittsburgh—(P)—Modest Charles Skeele Palmer has "just turned 81" still refusing to own one of the automobiles whose development he made possible.

"There's never been a car in the family," smilingly admits the retired scientist who invented the basic process for cracking oils to gasoline. "Not a one of us can drive. But I do take rides in them occasionally with my friends."

Senate May Revive State Milk Price Control Measure

Roosevelt Claims All Aims Of His Court Reorganization Program Have Been Fulfilled

Hyde Park, N. Y.—(P)—Claiming fulfillment of all the objectives of his 1937 court reorganization program, president Roosevelt began today three weeks of work and recreation far from Washington's humid heat.

A few hours before he left the capital last night for a visit at Hyde Park and a cruise of the east Canadian coast, the chief executive unexpectedly issued a statement saying:

"Attacks recently made on the supreme court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed."

The president's comment, recalling the bitter controversy over his defeated proposal to enlarge the supreme court if justices over 70 did not retire, was occasioned by his signing a bill which created an administrative officer to oversee affairs of federal courts.

Split Party Ranks
That measure was one of seven parts of his original proposal, which split Democratic ranks in congress and created nationwide argument. Six of the parts have been enacted into law, Mr. Roosevelt said, and added that the seventh "has been accomplished through the supreme court itself."

The country is naturally concerned with the attainment of proper objectives rather than any one of many possible methods proposed for the accomplishment of the end," the president's statement continued.

"I called attention (two and a half years ago) to the unwarranted attitude of the supreme court with reference to the exercise of its constitutional powers. Measures of social and economic reform were being impeded or defeated by narrow interpretations of the constitution, and by the assumption on the part of the supreme court of legislative powers which properly belonged to the congress."

"I recommended, was not adopted, but the objective, as every business have improved, he said, and business policies generally reflect the business progress during July represented a continuation of a "recovery movement" started in May, with activity well ahead of a year ago in all major lines.

Prospects for third-quarter business have improved, he said, and business policies generally reflect the business progress during July represented a continuation of a "recovery movement" started in May, with activity well ahead of a year ago in all major lines.

Retailer commitments in wholesale markets are enlarged, Hopkins' report showed, and industrial purchasing has expanded. Orders in many clothing lines showing substantial gains over the earlier part of the year were cited as indicative of the more confident attitude toward fall business.

Seasonal Peak
Construction operations were at a seasonal peak, activity in the industry being even greater than in the summer of 1937.

Retail trade in July was well ahead of a year ago, with marked gains in consumers' durable goods such as automobiles, refrigerators, furniture and electrical appliances, and gasoline consumption was at record levels.

Consumers' budgets were said to have benefited from lower food costs as compared with a year ago. Consumers' incomes in July were on a higher seasonally-adjusted basis than in June, following a substantial rise in employees' compensation from May to June.

Lepke Has $30,000 Price on His Head

New York—(P)—Somewhere in hiding today is a middle-aged man with a $30,000 price on his head.

He is Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, 42, a stocky, swarthy, big-nosed gangster—newest wearer of the ever-shifting title, "Public Enemy No. 1."

Edgar Hoover, G-man chief whose men have hunted Lepke for two years, will pay $5,000 for him. District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey—thanks to action yesterday by the city board of estimate—has raised New York's ante to $25,000.

Both Hoover and Dewey have promised to keep secret the name of the person who "puts the finger" on Lepke, and the reward will be paid whether the fugitive racks up the slaying of five former associates since he jumped $10,000 bail, is captured dead or alive.

In the hope of obtaining a lead to Lepke's whereabouts, Dewey ordered an eight-state alarm for Isidore Zennreich, 41, a partner of Lepke and Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro in the days when they dominated the baking and garment industry rackets here.

The search for Lepke was just one angle of an assault against a national "confederacy of crime" undertaken by a federal grand jury impaneled yesterday.

Burglar Gets Proceeds Of Church Collection

The home of the Rev. A. Quella, pastor of the St. Peter and Paul Catholic church, Hortonville, was burglarized on an undetermined amount last night. The burglar or burglars gained entrance to the home through a side window and escaped with the proceeds of the Sunday church collection and an additional $10 that was near the collection money. An investigation is being made by the sheriff's department.

Horlick Heir and Friend are Saved After Boat Sinks

Racine—(P)—William Horlick Sidley, 27, and a companion identified as Grover H. Smith of Milwaukee, were rescued by Lake Michigan coast guards yesterday as Sidley's new speedboat was split open by a huge wave about a mile off Racine harbor.

The two were in the water about 40 minutes after the craft capsized. Both were wearing life preservers. Sidley, who shares in the maled milk fortune, attracted attention by an hour's handkerchief fastened to an ear.

Racing coastguards, whose speedboat recently was transferred to Sheboygan, used a pickup boat in the rescue. They recovered the Sidley boat and towed it to shore. Sidley was placed under a doctor's care and treated for exposure. Smith, whose coastguards identified as the operator of a Milwaukee night club, returned to his home.

Prices on the balance of summer stocks of more than 60 Appleton merchants will be slashed to accommodate thrifty shoppers of Appleton and vicinity during the city's Dollar Day event Thursday.

Unparalleled values will be offered on summer goods, which will be cut to a minimum and on new fall stock, which will be labeled with special introductory prices in most of the stores participating.

The Dollar Day event, a tradition in Appleton, is being sponsored by the retail division of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce to give thrifty buyers a chance at some real bargains. Stores participating will be designated by the usual banners in the windows.

Information on Dollar Day bargains went to rural sections today by the advertising columns of the Post-Crescent and a special Dollar Day edition will be distributed in Appleton and other cities in the vicinity Wednesday to give readers ample time to make up their shopping lists.

Many merchants have ordered special stock to meet the demand for bargains and many will employ extra clerks to take care of the crowds that are expected to jam the downtown section Thursday.

Dollar Day comes only once in a while in Appleton and veteran shoppers already have cancelled full day at shopping and to take advantage of the special $1 prices on many articles.

It has been suggested that Christmas isn't so far off and the fall wedding season is about here. Dollar Day will offer an opportunity to do some of that Christmas shopping early and at nominal prices. Gifts of worth for fall weddings may be purchased well under their usual prices.

Illinois Court Holds Women Can Serve on Juries

Test Case Decision Rules Recently Passed Measures are Valid

Springfield, Ill.—The Illinois supreme court today upheld the right of women to serve on juries in this state.

The high court, in a vacation opinion, held that the women-on-juries laws passed by the recent general assembly and approved by Governor Horner May 12 were valid.

The ruling was made on a test case instituted by Cook county authorities to obtain a ruling before women had served on juries in many cases. The law became effective July 1 this year.

By prearrangement, the Cook county jury commissioners had refused to obey the act on the ground it was unconstitutional. The suit was brought in behalf of Clara L. Denny of Chicago.

11-Year Effort Holding that "none of the charters of liberty in which the right of trial by jury has been guaranteed contains any reference to the qualifications of jurors," the opinion added in part.

"Until recent times woman was not thought to be on a parity with man, and it was considered that she did not possess those qualitative attributes that made her capable of exercising the right of suffrage or rendering jury service."

"She was excluded from jury service on the false theory of economic, sociological and legal inferiority and not by any positive statement found in any of the constitutional provisions guaranteeing the right of trial by jury."

Today's opinion was the final legal step of more than eleven years' effort to establish the right of Illinois women to perform jury service.

Pending the supreme court's opinion on the new law, few women have been certified for jury duty in the state.

A law passed in 1929 allowing women to sit on juries was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court holding the legislature illegally submitted the question first to a referendum. There was no referendum provision in the present law.

Three Junk Dealers File Applications For City Licenses

Three additional applications for junk dealers' licenses have been filed in city hall since the last council meeting when Mayor Goodland ordered police to close junk yards the owners of which had not applied for licenses.

The applications of Abe Brudnick, 609 S. Bond street, Sam Shiff, 1008 N. Morrison street, and Shmuel Shikler, 211 E. Commercial street, were filed Monday. Other applications on file are those of Louis Blacher, 330 W. Wisconsin avenue, Nathan Jacobson, 327 W. Wisconsin avenue, L. Simon, 327 W. Wisconsin avenue, Louis Fink, 507 E. Pacific street, and Jacob Golper, 1319 N. Clark street.

Complaints against junk dealers operating in residential districts were voiced at the last council session when the license committee again deferred action on the licenses.

Windows in Appleton's New City Hall Washed

Windows in Appleton's new city hall were washed Friday and Saturday by the Appleton Window Cleaning company. The city council authorized the job at a cost of $85.

Workers are installing furniture, lighting fixtures and finishing the painting in the council chambers this week. The building will be ready for occupancy soon.

The all-time high for millionaires was set in 1929, when 515 persons in this country had an income of a million dollars or more.

52,000 American Soldiers to Hold Practice War This Month

New York.—The largest concentration of troops in the United States since the Civil war will assemble for maneuvers near Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 15-25.

Soldiers from the Northeastern United States—52,000 strong—will stage a practice "war" that will come as close as possible to conditions of actual warfare.

The difference between the maneuvers and war is that umpires instead of bullets will decide who wins.

Otherwise, everything "fair" in war—spying, wire-tapping, surprise attacks before dawn, quick shifts behind smoke screens—will be "fair" in the mock battle between the Blacks and Blues of the U. S. First Army.

The mechanized Seventh Cavalry Brigade of Fort Knox, Ky., is coming to Plattsburg to the maneuvers in a column 15 miles long.

Although new theories and weapons will be tested, army officials say the main object of the maneuvers is "to train troops in their duties under mobilization plans, and to train the higher staff in the movement of vast masses of men in one thing to drill a company of men on a 50-acre plot and another to bring 50,000 men together and keep them from getting hopelessly tangled."

Eight townships have been leased for "military trespass"; orders for 344,000 pounds of fresh beef have been placed; and elaborate timetables have been made for the moving of First Army troops, beginning midnight, Aug. 13. Colorado Peak Claims Life of Denver Climber

Man Is 13th to Die in Attempt to Scale Sheer Cliff

Estes Park, Colo.—A Denver commercial photographer, gashed on the head by a falling rock after spending 20 hours on a ledge in lashing rain and snow, is the latest victim of a Long's Peak climbing tragedy.

Gerald Clark, 30, died late yesterday while being lowered 1,500 feet down the sheer east face of the 14,255-foot peak in Rocky Mountain National park.

Hewes-Kirkwood inn, climbers' resort at the peak base, listed Clark as the 13th to die attempting to scale the east face. In all, the peak has claimed 30 or more victims since 1880.

Clark was stranded Sunday on the ledge when he dropped the hammer he used to drive petates, mountain climbing spikes. His companions, Eddie Watson, 23, and Edmund Cooper, 32, both of Denver, were unable to follow him up the Second Chimney, a perpendicular "trough," and went after help.

Rain and snow, the first widespread mountain storm since spring, forced a trio of rescuers—Ranger Ernest Field and Bob Boyd and Bob Lewis of Denver, to halt overnight on a high ledge. Reaching Clark yesterday, they spent five hours lowering him to a glacier and rock field where artificial respiration was tried unsuccessfully.

Cornell Orville Miller of Larimer county said Clark died of exposure and a concussion.

Asks Cooperation of Officials During Fair

K. P. Van Epps, secretary of the Weyauwega fair committee, today asked Mayor Goodland and other city officers to cooperate in arranging for Appleton day, Aug. 25, at the fair.

Bob Neller, formerly of Appleton and now a ventriloquist on shows of national importance, will be featured on the entertainment program during the fair. The dates of the event are Aug. 25, 26 and 27.

Badger Congressmen Choose Their Sides During Session

BY RUBY A. BLACK

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau Washington.—At the beginning of the seven-months' session of congress just ended, the Wisconsin congressional delegation split all over the place, or agreed, regardless of party, but toward the end, the Republicans members stuck with the closely knit coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats, with the two Progressives sticking together, on most votes on which there were roll calls.

The Republicans from Wisconsin are: Congressmen Stephen Bolles, Janesville; Charles Hawks, Jr., Horicon; John C. Schaefer, Milwaukee; Lewis D. Thill, Milwaukee; Frank B. Keeffe, Oshkosh; Reid F. Murray, Waupaca; Joshua L. Johns, Algoma; and, until he died July 4, Harry W. Griswold, West Salem.

The Progressives in the House of Representatives are Congressmen Merlin Hull, Black River Falls, and Bernard J. Gehrman, Mellen.

Their votes on important issues on which they were recorded during the session follow:

Hull and Gehrman for and all the Republicans against increasing the WPA appropriation for the last part of the fiscal year ended June 30 to $875,000,000, which the President sought from $725,000,000. The Republicans won.

All but Hawks voted for passage of the WPA bill for 1939-40.

All voted against a $5,000,000 fund to improve the harbor of Guam, in the Pacific, and won.

Bolles was the only Wisconsin member who voted for the big navy appropriations, surprising many people, as he had previously editorially opposed a big navy in his Janesville newspaper.

Bolles and Johns were the only Wisconsin members who voted to increase the rivers and harbors improvement fund to $96,000,000 from $71,000,000, and to increase the flood control fund to $133,000,000 from $110,000,000, both of which passed.

All voted for Hawk's motion to send the appropriations bill for the state, commerce, and justice departments back to the committee with instructions that it insert a provision to prohibit purchases of foreign products and other farm products of which a sufficient supply is produced in this country. The motion lost.

Hull and Gehrman voted for the final passage of the agriculture department's appropriations bill, including the party payments, while the Republicans voted against it.

Split on Loan Program Hull and Gehrman voted to take up a president's program for financing self-liquidating public works, while all the Republicans present and voting opposed taking up the bill, and Thill was paired against it. The rule for consideration of the bill was defeated.

Hull and Gehrman likewise voted to take up the $800,000,000 housing and slum-clearance bill, with the Republicans all opposing it, and the Democrats again winning.

Keeffe and Hull voted against limiting to $3,500 the cost of houses in apartments built under the previous housing program, while the rest were for the limit. The limitation was lost.

The delegation split on strictly party lines on the bill to extend the stabilization fund and continue the president's power to devalue the dollar. The Republicans voted against taking the bill up, and for every move to kill it or curtail the president's powers, while the Progressives voted on the opposite side. In the end, the president's program won.

The delegation was a unit, however, in opposing the president's neutrality program, supporting moves to limit the president's powers, and opposing passage of the bill. They lost in the house, but the senate refused to bring the bill to the floor for debate.

Schaefer and Thill voted against the "general welfare" or modified Townsend plan, which lost.

Oppose Social Security Change Thill was the only one to vote against passage of the amendments liberalizing the social security law, "freezing" the payroll taxes at one per cent on the employer and the aged, increasing the benefits for children, survivors, and the aged.

All Wisconsin members supported moves to up down the president's powers in reorganizing the executive branch of the government, but Gehrman voted against sending the bill back to committee.

Bolles, Thill, and Murray voted against the president's army expansion plan, Schaefer was absent, and the rest supported it.

Bolles and Hawks voted against federal taxation of the income of employees of local and state governments on the same basis as other income. Keeffe was absent, and the rest voted to eliminate this tax exemption. The bill was passed.

All voted for the tax bill which repealed the undistributed profits tax, which was passed. Johns was absent on this vote.

All Wisconsin members voted for an additional $100,000 for the Dies investigating committee, and all for an investigation of WPA, while Gehrman voted against investigating the national labor relations board with Hull absent. All these investigations were adopted.

All voted for the Hatch "clean politics" bill, which passed.

Ohio Legion Man Claims That He's Long Lost 'Elmer'

Breaks Silence When Organization Announces Contest

Chicago.—To that oft-repeated cry, "Where's Elmer?", Earl B. Zaayer of Columbus, Ohio, spoke up today and said, "Here".

Until now Zaayer had been satisfied just to stroll around at American Legion conventions dressed in his hayseed outfit. But since Fred Boissy, chairman of trophies for the 1939 convention at Chicago, has begun a contest to establish Elmer's identity, Zaayer saw fit to break his silence.

"People began calling me Elmer for no reason at all, as my name is not Elmer," he wrote to Boissy. Continuing on this logical plane, he reported he was tagged with the name when he appeared at the Louisville convention in 1929, and that "it kept growing" at succeeding conventions.

Zaayer, who is superintendent of the motor vehicle service at the Columbus post office, was the first to claim the name, Boissy said.

The quip "Where's Elmer?" was uttered seriously by some one at an early legion convention and taken up by the wags until it became a national gag-line.

Now the organization thinks its members ought to be informed not only where Elmer is, but who he is.

District Superintendent Will Conduct Quarterly Conference

Officers of First Methodist church for the coming year will be elected at the last quarterly conference Friday night at the church. A 6:30 picnic supper will be served to official board members and their families preceding the meeting which will be conducted by Dr. Ira E. Schlegelhauf, district superintendent.

The sermon at the Methodist church Sunday was preached by the Rev. H. C. Culver, Jr., Nashua, Iowa, whose subject was "Home-made Religion."

The Rev. R. E. Ziesemer, pastor of Mt. Olive Lutheran church, and E. E. Mayerhoff attended the sessions of the convention of the Lutheran joint synod of Wisconsin and Other States Monday and Tuesday at Watertown.

As Ernie Pyle Sees America

Red Lake, Ariz.—The night before we left Albuquerque on this long trip into the Navajo country, a newspaper friend brought us what purported to be a news story hot off the teletype machine.

It told how a party of 13 tourists had been set upon by the Indians, six of them being killed, and the other seven escaping minus their scalps.

It wasn't, of course, a news story at all. Our friend had written it out himself, and we all had a big laugh over it.

So we went to the other extreme, scouted at Indian savagery, and dubbed ourselves "The Navajo Expedition of 1939." Said we "if there's any scalping, we'll do it."

"Yeah," said our cynical friend. "I know what'll happen. You'll get up there in the wilds and those Navajos will sell you a lot of third-rate rugs at double tourist prices."

Of course, none of these things has come to pass. We haven't scalped anybody, haven't been scalped, and haven't even bought any rugs. We've seen hundreds of Indians, and you consider it the climax of a perfect day if you can even get one to speak to you.

I don't know anything about Indians, and doubt that I ever will. Some white people down here, sort of Indian-daffy, they make a fad of the Indians; consider them utterly superior to the white man. Others dislike the Indians thoroughly. The more understanding whites respect them for their qualities of simple goodness. I have tried, and tried hard, to get interested in Indians. It is no go. I am not what you would call anti-Indian. I'm merely non-Indian. I can't help it. It's just the way my nature runs.

So when I write about Indians it will be based only on what white people have told me.

The Navajos are the biggest tribe of Indians in America. They number now around 50,000, and are increasing all the time. They are a pastoral people, constantly moving with their sheep and cattle and horses.

They do little farming; few of them are settled; I am told that only five per cent of them speak English; out of the whole Navajo race only three men have risen to prominence.

The Navajos still stick close to the beliefs and customs of old. They do not have towns, nor permanent homes. They move several times a year, herding their flocks here and there. They build a new house, or "hogan," whenever they go. The "hogan" is a round, one-roomed hut, made of logs and brush and chinked with mud.

When a Navajo dies in his house, it is never used again. The family smashes in the back of the house, and there it stands till it falls down. It is sacred and taboo.

Sometimes white men will come out and tear down the ruins and use the logs for firewood. The Indians don't object. But they wouldn't go into a house heated by that wood.

You could go out into the desert, take some logs from a deserted house and build yourself a campfire and boil some coffee. The Indians would sit at a distance and watch you, and there would be no feelings over your tearing down the spirit-ridden hogan.

But they would not think of getting close enough to absorb any of the heat from that fire, and they would not drink a cup of coffee boiled over it, even if they were starving.

Wealth In Horses Indians have lots of horses. People tell me a Navajo measures his wealth by the number of horses he has. Yet the Indian doesn't have any use for more than a couple of horses.

The result is that the ranges are full of Navajo ponies, eating their heads off and doing nobody the slightest good.

The government has recently started a horse-reduction program, to free the sparse ranges for the Navajos' sheep. Those who know say it is a wholly worthy program.

But the Indians don't like it. The newspapers are carrying pieces about how wonderfully the Indians are cooperating. Range riders and traders tell me that is not the truth.

Just before the program started, a horse buyer came through a certain section. He was offering $10 and $12 a head for horses. He didn't get many. The Indians wouldn't sell. But in a few weeks they'll have to sell those same horses for $2 a head, to be made into fertilizer and dog food. That's your Indian co-operation—and foresight.

If you come through this country as a tourist, the thing that will impress you most is the way the Indians stare at you.

It isn't a stare of curiosity. They see plenty of white people. It's an unearthly steady stare, like somebody in a trance. They just stare you to death.

We met an Indian riding a horse. He was the darndest one yet. We waved, but he just kept staring. His horse jumped and plunged, but he never took his eyes off us.

I believe if he had fallen off his horse and rolled over, he would have kept that stare directed right at us, like a contortionist holding a glass of water on his head.

Council to Study Petition on Note

Attorney Threatens Suit Unless Action Is Taken to Collect

Kaukauna—On August 17 the council will consider Emmet Rohan's petition asking the collection of the note to the Moloch Foundry and Machine company be made. The meeting has been put off to Thursday because of the American Legion convention at Oshkosh early in the week.

Rohan has petitioned the city to start legal action against the company and against the nine guarantors of the note, threatening a taxpayers' suit if this is not done. The council has been told by Harry F. McAndrews, city attorney, that its action in cancelling the endorsements was legal.

The petition continues: "Please take further notice that the above liability of said Moloch Foundry and Machine company is long past due, and that said corporation is insolvent, and that unless you proceed with the legal action against the endorsers of said note to collect the said money justly due and owing to the city of Kaukauna, the undersigned will, as a taxpayer of the city of Kaukauna, institute said action."

"Please take further notice that if you do not institute this action, and if you will not consent to be joined as a party plaintiff in the action which I intend to institute, I will proceed with the proper legal action to join the city of Kaukauna as a party defendant in accordance with the statutes in such case made and provided."

Bridgetender Avoids Accident as Motorist Drives Onto Open Span

Kaukauna—There was a little excitement on the Lawe street bridge yesterday afternoon as a car driven by Joseph Kuehl, W. Kuehl went through one of the lowered gates, according to Elmer Johnson, bridge tender, and onto the draw, which had been lowered about three feet at the south end. Johnson raised the north end alone to allow the boat to pass, and then slowly put the south part in place, allowing Kuehl to drive ahead and then back off.

Forecast $2,500 Increase in City Relief Expenses

Additional Applications For Aid Follow WPA Furloughs

Kaukauna—An increase of about $2,500 per month in the city's relief expenses is estimated by the poor committee as men who have been employed on WPA 15 months or more are slated for dismissal by August 31. Last week about 40 laborers were laid off. Yesterday morning state WPA administrators were notified from Washington that the dismissal of those employed continuously for the 18-month period was to be resumed. Most of those laid off last week did not have their legal residence in Kaukauna, but several who did have applied for relief.

It is estimated that about 50 men, whose legal residence is in Kaukauna, and who have been employed for the 18-month period, may be dismissed. The relief bill for July was $2,344, made up of $1,174 of direct relief and $1,169 paid out for labor on work relief projects.

$16,900 in 7 months
In seven months the city has spent a total of $16,977 for relief. The budget called for an expenditure of $20,000 for the entire year. If 50 men are thrown on relief the cost for the last five months will be at least $20,000 alone, and the 1939 bill may run to $40,000 or twice the estimated cost.

The number on relief has shown a decline each month since February, from 125 in that month to 63 on August 1.
Working at the power plant as the month began were 272. It is not expected that dismissals will interfere with the project's completion, as needed replacements can be brought here from other cities. The power project is one of the largest in the state.

Martin Efficient Minority Leader For G.O.P. Party

Massachusetts Representative Kept Membership United, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Solely from the standpoint of minority strategy and effectiveness, the Republican party did a job in the last session of congress which has seldom been equalled. If it be the desirable objective of a minority party to throw money wrenched into the majority party and vote wherever possible a veto, the Republican record in the house of representatives measures up to anything the Democratic minority ever achieved.

To Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, the minority leader, goes the credit of keeping the Republican membership united so that on every important occasion the Republicans cast their votes solidly on one side or the other of pending questions.

Mr. Martin's effectiveness was the envy of the Democratic leadership. Although Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas was struggling to keep his party membership intact, he was frustrated again and again, first, by desertions and, second, by absenteeism.

When the country increased the Republican membership in the house at the polls last November from 90 to 169, it was an open question whether this tide of protest would be rendered effective. It could easily have been dissipated had the Republicans split apart into groups and factions. But Representative Martin had a simple idea to follow. He kept the united front by an effective check and protest, but divided they would play into the hands of the Democrats.

Noon is Deadline
All entries for the show must be in by Saturday noon, Mrs. John G. Haen, entry committee head, said today. The exhibits will be judged soon after that time, and blue ribbons given to displays totaling from 95 to 100 points. Mrs. W. E. Harwood is chairman of the committee on flower arrangement and judging, assisted by Mrs. Ben Prugh and Mrs. H. P. Weckwerth. Assisting Mrs. Haen on the entry committee are Mrs. L. F. Nelson, Miss Marie Gossens, Mrs. William Klumb, Mrs. A. R. Mill, Mrs. D. E. McCarty, Mrs. Michael Oliva, Mrs. Red Smith, Mrs. Elizabeth Bueth, Mrs. V. Brenzel, Mrs. William F. Slums Aren't the Only Evils That Beset Modern Children

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—I heard the other night on the air, in a discussion of various topics, a young orator whom we will call Elliott Roosevelt deploring the heartlessness of those who had opposed the housing bill on politico-economic grounds. In the course of this address in which, toward the end, the profit motive was revealed with elephantine subtlety, our orator grew almost tearful about a blue-eyed, elfin child who lacked the material comforts of a good home.

She lived in the slum.
We received the benefit of his wisdom and high-mindedness on the subject of slums and their effect on the young, and as he talked I just wished that he had found time to discuss the importance of patience, morality and integrity in the home and the effect on children of the abandonment of one parent by the other and, later, complete divorce. It seemed to me that this young statesman valued plumbing, certified milk, clothing, play-space and other material comforts far above, indeed to the total exclusion, of all the other factors that contribute to the moral and spiritual well-being of a child. Perhaps it was tactless of me to mention the matter and it may have been only for reasons of good taste that he himself refrained from speaking of divorce as a possible affliction to children who find themselves caught in a middle of he-and-she fights in the family circle. The divorce rate in this country has now risen to about one in six marriages, and someone's best friends, and I suppose most important advisers, are divorced so we may have have created another saboteur. However, along with those graphs and time-table statistics which show the proportion of ex-newsboys in American prisons there are some which indicate the proportions of prisoners who came from broken and disrupted homes and whose waywardness is attributed to this condition. This proportion is very high. Divorce is a luxury which is sparingly patronized by the poor people of the slums so one may take it that the broken-home criminals in prison did not come from such neighborhoods but from homes in which squalor was spiritual not material and, in some cases, undoubtedly chargeable to the selfishness or worse fault of one or more parents. Squalor is not only physical, hunger and dirt are good for the high suburbs and cases of waywardness have occurred in which young offenders received leniency or sympathy on the ground that the moral surroundings of well-provided homes were bad.

Gameness in Parents Important for Children
Now, no sensible person would undertake to argue that poverty, hunger and dirt are good for the young children, although Abe Lincoln is one among many who could be over patronage matters served to break the big Democratic majority into pieces. To this should be added a certain arbitrariness of view exhibited by the administration leaders in dealing with the conservatives.

Overconfidence
It is still a mystery also why so many Democrats were permitted to absent themselves from the caucus without being called to book. But it is likewise true that the effects of the tactics of the earlier days of the administration, when orders were taken to Capitol Hill by tactless aides of the administration, were hard to overcome and could not be replaced by a different strategy without the minute and painstaking help of the president and his cabinet. A majority party in congress has to be nursed along by the executive and his leaders just as is a minority. The feeling sometimes that the majority is so big that it can ride easily over its opposition is like the overconfidence which winning athletic teams display only to be caught unawares by an alert, hard-playing opposition. That's the story of the last congress and explains many of the contradictions and paradoxes in the voting records, as well as the series of defeats administered to the party in power.

Plans for the installation of flood lights at the baseball park for use at baseball, softball and football games will be discussed. Petitions signed by over 1,000 persons requesting the installation were presented at the last meeting of the council on Aug. 1. The petitioners pointed out that crowds of over 1,000 persons regularly attend night ball games at other valley cities.

The aldermen also requested a meeting with the water and light commission recently because there are several new men on the council and they desired a better understanding of the operation of the department.

The Menasha council accepted the petitions for the flood lights but took no definite action except to call for the joint meeting. Some of the aldermen expressed approval of the idea, particularly if an arrangement can be made so that the water and light will finance the installation. Payments would be made from the gate receipts at ball games.

Retrievers Work At Club Session

Twin City Group Sponsors First Lesson of Training Series

Neenah — The Twin City Field Trial and Training Dog club, sponsored by the Twin City Rod and Gun club, held its first lesson of the retrieving series at Eagles hall, Neenah, at 7:30 Monday evening with 40 persons in attendance.

Several retrieving types of dogs, among them Chesapeake, springers and golden Labradors, were shown. Another lesson will be given at 7:30 Monday evening, Aug. 14, in Eagles hall.

The Twin City Rod and Gun club released 449 pheasants last Saturday between Waverly beach and Lake-wood and in the town of Clayton. The club still has several hundred more for release but is waiting until the birds get somewhat older.

This week, the club will receive about 400 month-old game birds which they will keep for about three weeks before releasing.

About 1,500 pheasants were liberated in various parts of the country last weekend. The birds had been raised from day old chicks to the present time by Winnebago county conservation clubs. They are now about eight weeks old and by fall should be in full plumage. About 1,000 month old birds will be released from the state game and fur farm at Poyntette for county groups this week.

Traffic Check to Be Meeting Topic

Neenah Council to Sponsor Survey on N. Commercial Street

Neenah — The Neenah council committee on public improvements will meet tonight to make arrangements for a traffic check on N. Commercial street, according to City Clerk H. S. Zemlock. The Neenah council at its meeting last Wednesday voted to conduct a check on the traffic on the lone bridge from the business district to the island from Aug. 10 to Sept. 10. Men will work in three shifts of six hours each.

The council decided on the check in order to be prepared to ask for a second bridge if another WPA program gets under way. The state highway commission last year refused to grant state aid for the proposed span following a hearing in Neenah.

The Neenah aldermen maintain that Superhighway 41 has taken very little traffic from Neenah although the reduction of traffic by the new beltline was the main reason advanced by the commission for refusing a new bridge.

GOVERNOR HEIL AND HIS PROGRAM

Mr. Heil has leveled his attack in various directions blaming the stalemate at the legislature upon everyone but himself. We do not think that the governor is blameless for the condition that has developed.

Leadership in a democracy demands a pointing of the way even if it will not tolerate a lashing of those others who have responsibility in the matter of legislation. In avoiding the distasteful aspects of a "must" program the governor has made the error, we believe, of lacking definiteness in his proposals.

We think that long ago now Mr. Heil should have accepted the responsibility for a clear and precise legislative program involving not alone the number of unnecessary state employees to be released but the sources of revenue to be tapped in order to maintain the treasury in solvent condition.

After making that proposal he should have fought for it in all legitimate ways. He should not, of course, have secured votes to sustain it by offering fat jobs to legislators. He should not, either, resort to other methods partaking of coercion.

Neither should he have been surprised were his recommendations not entirely accepted. From the ever rocking cradle to the ever silent grave compromises must be effected if civilized, that is genuinely democratic, government is to be maintained.

Naturally, of course, the public would expect the governor in submitting his program to the legislature, to abide by his campaign promises, and in particular that one relating to economy.

BRIDGES SHOULD GO TO LONDON

Mr. Bridges' long examination at the hearing for his deportation should acquaint the country better than any other one thing with the sort of man he is. He appears like a double for Tom Mooney.

It may not be such a wild construction of his language to say that he believes that nearly everyone in the country that has more than 40 acres of land, if a farmer, or a 50x150 lot, if a city dweller, stole what he got.

The details of his examination reveal what the scientists would call a psychopathic case. He has great energy and resourcefulness, the elements that go to create what we call ability, but he has a sort of martyr complex, chronic "hurt" feelings, the confirmed conviction that those whose interests may run counter to his are a bunch of sly and unconscionable scoundrels who couldn't be trusted away from the glare of an electric street lamp.

Banish for the time being, Mr. Bridges' wily contortions to escape the Red brand, his answer that the Communists aided him "possibly ten times, maybe more" but that their combined actions were soft and lawful and the association left no impression upon his soul, and direct attention to his denunciation of all corporations, particularly the "Henry Fords, Morgans and Tom Girdlers" in them, and then his conclusion that "I don't find any corporations working for the minimum wage or seeking the American standard of living" and "you have as fine a mixture of sulky misinformation as was ever poured from a soup tureen."

Can Mr. Bridges actually be ignorant of the fact that the great corporations in this country including those directed by the gentlemen he named are not only helped by a minimum wage law but are made secure thereby forevermore? Can it be that this man who deigns to lead tens of thousands of workers is completely uninformed of the American competitive system? Does he not know that an established corporation in any line of business with ample sinews of war in the way of bank accounts has a veritable horror of the appearance upon its horizon of some active, restless industrial executive who builds a competitive industry slowly and laboriously and is able to stand on his feet against the great enterprise solely by stretching hours of work and employing men not quite capable of qualifying for his big competitor? The wage and hour law brought no condemnation from the Big Fellows excepting as some complained over orders that were impractical as applied to the nature of their business.

But such is the leadership on the Pacific waterfronts. And such is Mr. Bridges from Australia. And such was Tom Mooney who figured that dynamite might not be such a bad weapon. And such were the anarchists that blew police officers to pieces in the famous Haymarket riots in Chicago.

But it would be highly erroneous to dismiss this prescription of a man as having been compounded by the devil, for here and there, just enough truth may be poured into the mixture to make it occasionally sparkle, and sometimes even foam over the top.

It was all right for Mr. Bridges to come to this country but he should have stayed only long enough to pick up Tom Mooney and take him to London where they could both join the Irish Republican army.

MISUSING UNION FUNDS

After the rather disgraceful attack of Mr. Lewis upon the Vice-President Senator Tydings offered a bill to amend the Corrupt Practices Act so as to forbid all organizations, labor unions included, from making political contributions unless the money was collected for that special purpose and the men who paid it over knew for what it was to be used.

This proposal, fortunately, was not adopted, perhaps because of the heat and the rush of congressmen to get home. But the only good reason why it was not immediately made into law is that it adopted now it would have appeared as an angry piece of retaliation, and that is an element that should be kept out of our law-making processes.

It is a well known fact that the Miners' Union which Mr. Lewis controlled has a chattel mortgage on the Democratic party. That union, at Mr. Lewis' direction, contributed several hundred thousand dollars to the Democratic campaign fund, but with all the sagacity of a shrewd pawn broker it "loaned" another $470,000. Contributions are gifts and therefore gone forever. Loans always give the loaner a sort of proprietary interest in the loanee.

That Mr. Lewis has acted the part of a threatening pawnbroker with the Democratic party on many occasions is well known. Whenever a congressman feels the necessity of voting against a Lewis proposal he may expect to be bawled out even as Garner was.

Just as the individual is the only one who is permitted to vote in this country so should individuals alone be permitted to make contributions to campaign funds.

Excepting labor organizations from the rule that prohibited organization contributions to campaign funds has not been found helpful to our government, as Mr. Lewis' constant bullying has clearly demonstrated.

PROHIBITION AND THE BRITISH IN INDIA

The Province of Bombay with about 25 million people and the most important industrial area in India has gone dry upon the urging and with the benediction of Mahatma Gandhi.

Another noble experiment may be in order. And it is all right with us so long as it is at about the most remote place on the globe that can be found.

But the event is worthy of notice in that the British have not imposed this law upon the people under their rule. The British are much too smart for any such high-handed policy. That is why the British have been the greatest of colonial administrators. They do not force things either away from or down their subjects' throats that have to do with their religious customs or social habits.

One of the most important blunders made all through the centuries by colonizing nations is the attempt to create in their subjects shadows of themselves. Because Spain was Catholic she must make all her subjects Catholic whether they liked it or not. Because France and Portugal and Germany pursued a certain mode of life they seemed to consider it an impertinence upon the part of the blacks and browns and yellows under their suzerainty not to be enthusiastic about living the same way. Imperial Rome, 20 centuries ago, was a highly successful colonizer during all the period that she treated her colonies upon a business basis and didn't allow too much sentiment or vagrant emotions to sway her. So it is with Britain today. Colonies are for business purposes. Business cannot continue advantageously unless the people are contented. The people become restless and highly discontented when their ways of life are constantly altered or interfered with without their approval.

Opinions of Others

COMPENSABLE HEART DISEASE

A recent decision of the supreme court of the state of Washington illustrates anew the tendency of courts in workmen's compensation cases to give employees even the benefit of the doubt and almost none to the employer or the employer's insurer. In this case it was held that the death of a coal miner, who suffered an attack of heart disease while at work in a mine, was compensable. Yet it had been shown that for a long time before this man went into the mine on the day of his death he had been afflicted with fatty degeneration of the heart, hardening of the arteries and chronic myocarditis.

From a summary of the court's opinion it appears that "a relatively short time after he had experienced some shock or fright as a result of the fall of a mass of rock," this miner collapsed while engaged in heavy muscular work. In view of the condition of his heart it was said to be clear, however, that his collapse could have been, and in all probability was, precipitated by the degree of exertion required by his work, "even if the effect of shock or fright be eliminated." Although this miner could have died in bed or away from the mine, "the fact remains that he was stricken in the mine," while engaged in work that admittedly would have subjected

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—Mrs. Roosevelt's frequent stopovers in town are accomplished with graceworthy restraint on the part of the press. Her goings are set down with respectful conservatism and given a modest position somewhere inside the journals at about page 6.

Unlike the visits of the ladies from Hollywood whose managers were ahead of them to make sure their Glamour Girls are welcomed by Admiring Throngs and newspaper photographers, Mrs. Roosevelt's appearances in the borough are reported after they have taken place, not before. The first lady, therefore, is able to move about town without too much attention. It is human nature, however, for the stores and shops where she trades, and the theatres which she attends, to send notice to the gazettes of her presence, and so the gazettes in due and deliberate course report the event the following day.

There is one exception. Mrs. Roosevelt frequently drops into the Biltmore Hotel, but the occasions are never tattled to the press gentlemen. The hotel management assumes that Mrs. Roosevelt appreciates a bit of anonymity, so it manfully stifles the temptation to let the world know she was there.

The Biltmore is the most likely spot in town to run into Prominent Democrats, those such as running into interests you. It is there that the Democratic National Committee has its headquarters. Postmaster General James A. Farley is around there a lot. When he isn't, there's a head waiter in the Biltmore's Bowman Room who is his spitting image.

The Plantation in Harlem is about the only rhythm resort in that center of septians to which the Stay-Out-Late White Folks Journey after exhausting the bed-room of the palatial pleasure places. The negro is a prodigious entertainer, never tiring so long as there remain any customers to cheer. Long after bars are closed, which is 4 a.m., the Plantation entertainers continue to make music, and the white teeth of the piano player gleam enthusiastically even while outside the morning sun lights the waking streets for the milkman.

The determination of Helen Dell, sister of the late Dorothy Dell of the movies, to win a place of her own in the theatre goes forward encouragingly. Opening in the musical "Yokel Boy" in a small part, the young lady from Louisiana has been made understudy to Dixie Dunbar, another southern girl, who has one of the leads.

Speaking of young ladies from the South, last season's two sensations from down there—Mary Martin of "Leave It to Me" and Helen Claire of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye"—will probably know before they snow flies whether their Broadway success is to be based on the screen. Both young women failed to impress Hollywood on previous excursions there, and both got another chance after their distinctive Broadway performances.

Madge Evans, one of the flicker femmes, has been playing in the summer theatre, partly because Philip Kingsley, the playwright to whom she is married, believes summer stock is the best possible training for the Broadway stage. It was at Suffern, N. Y., that the two met a year ago. Kingsley suggested that she take a role in a play he was directing there. She did—and love bloomed.

Miss Evans expects to play on Broadway next fall. Kingsley is producing a play, "Outward Bound," which has an outstanding female role. I asked Miss Evans if she had given any thought to taking that role. "Certainly not!" she exclaimed. "I wouldn't take his stage direction if I never played on Broadway. Did you ever see him direct? Why, he's a slave driver! He's crazy!"

So she won't take his direction. All she'd do was—marry him!

Johnny Green, the composer-pianist-band leader, has just finished a fantasia for piano and orchestra which is to be played at Carnegie Hall this fall, probably with Jose Iturbi at the piano. He calls it "Music for Elizabeth"—Elizabeth being the former Betty Furness—his wife.

Looking Backward

25 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Aug. 11, 1914

Italy had demanded an explanation relative to the bombardment of Antivari, Montenegro, by the Austrians. France was officially at war with Austria, having broken off all diplomatic relations. All Britons and Russians in Germany were reported to have been imprisoned in a fortress in the Kaiser's effort to thwart spies. The British government had asked the United States to effect the Britons' release.

A cablegram had been received from George C. Sherman stating that he was in Stockholm, Sweden, having left Russia just in time to avoid trouble caused by the war.

10 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1929

The temperature at noon that day was only 65 degrees.

Appleton's new building code, consisting of 60 pages of regulations concerning building and the installation of electrical wiring and equipment, was to be presented to the common council of the council Wednesday evening.

Mrs. A. A. Wettengel, Onida street, entertained about 20 guests at a 6 o'clock dinner Monday evening. Bridge was played with prizes going to Mrs. Albert Rule, Miss Catherine Tracy, Miss Mable Younger and Mrs. Adrian Fass. Honor guests were the Misses Mildred and Sadie Anthes, Colfax, Wash.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

AT SKIPPER'S CHRISTENING

Since God made babies free from care, And filled with laughter and surprise, When Skipper laughed above the prayer, God looked upon him with kind eyes.

He is so very fresh from Heaven, He still has down upon his wings. Although his months scarce number seven, He knows a number of quaint things.

The truth that he has mastered finds An echo in each adult heart; Love is a tie that closely binds A family blessed from the start.

His father stands by mother's side; His sister watches from the pew, And love keeps Skipper laughing-eyed Until the christening is through.

his heart to strain beyond its capacity to withstand.

The purport of this ruling seems to be that an employer is under obligation to make sure that his employees are not suffering from illness likely to attack them while they are on the job. If the employee conceals from his employer the fact that he is so afflicted, that is the employer's bad fortune. Evidently it would be his bad fortune also if he allowed himself to be imposed upon sufficiently to give a job to some person in an advanced state of heart disease anxious to make some kind of financial arrangement for the benefit of his family.—New York Sun.

TELULAH PARK

Editor Post-Crescent—A short time ago Appleton had something for which other communities and visitors from other parts of the state envied us, with good reason. Through the cooperation of the civic-minded owners, the state department, and a few real conservationists, we possessed the only wild life sanctuary of its kind within the corporate limits of a city anywhere in this region—Telulah park.

Rich in Indian lore and tradition, and closely associated with the earlier history of Appleton and the Fox River valley, it was planned that this should be a perpetual sanctuary for the enjoyment of all who cared.

There were ancient trees with underground that attracted, sheltered and fed thousands of birds of many species. There were wild flowers and medicinal herbs of great variety. The delicate maiden-hair fern and a host of other wildlings, which elsewhere had retreated to distant places, grew there. Those few acres were a paradise for the nature lover, the student, the botanist. Easily accessible and, with a very few reasonable restrictions, open to everyone; at no cost to the taxpayers.

Now, under city ownership and the direction of the Park board, Telulah park is being "improved" by WPA labor with the help of plows, tractors, scrapers, axes, saws and fire—yes, FIRE—deliberately used.

I am entirely in favor of plenty of play space (even at considerable expense) to the city's children and those adults who want it, but, with all the space already equipped and available, was it necessary to destroy perfectly sound, century-old trees to construct another softball diamond? Must young trees be uprooted and left to wither instead of being planted elsewhere?

It is necessary to provide big circles and loops of auto roads in a comparatively small park? Must a "bridal path" (Post-Crescent, Aug. 4), wide enough for a truck, be slashed through beautiful wooded areas? Above all, is it necessary to employ fire to destroy ground cover, shrubbery and trees that should be left, if even a small part of the park, instead of "most" of it, "to be left in its natural state?"

Are not those citizens—and there are still a goodly number—who desire a little space free of noisy crowds, heavy play equipment and beer stands, entitled to a bit of consideration and a small part of this city's park areas?

If the city hall feels this honestly is the will of the majority, why ignore the result of one referendum and regard another as holy mandate? If it is too good to be true, then it is the fault of WPA, why not dispense with that help until it is more intelligently directed? The city already has a considerable debt acquired in that way; or is the public still under the fond delusion that WPA costs the taxpayers nothing?

How much of this "improved" park did your reporter really see—before and after? Couldn't the press leave the Orient Express, even Washington and Madison, to work out their own destinies for a little while and give more space and thought and direction to the problems in our own dooryards? With good citizens trying to supply the crying need for, and the much-talked-about, public swimming pool by private subscription, we spend much time and the necessary amount destroying something beautiful we already have.

Knowing that I am voicing the sentiments of many other citizens, I do not make this plea in the hope of halting the destruction now so far advanced, but there is still a little that may be salvaged and restored. All lovers of real things can take but one look at what once was beautiful Telulah—and weep.

The best political story since the Republicans moved into the capitol last winter was the senate coalition crack-up at the weekend with the donations heard throughout the state.

Its meaning and its potential effect has been quite thoroughly reviewed by this time. Some other aspects are worth consideration now.

The smash of the arrangement upon which the administration depended for what ever success it has had thus far illustrates what a fine act of politics, it illustrates how the plainest of things may upset the plans of great political parties, and it illustrates that a good party leader in a legislative body must be something more than a master of the rule-book and parliamentary technicalities.

COAKLEY BLUNDER

Early in the session the Republicans in the senate chose Maurice Coakley of Beloit, 33 year old parliamentarian, as their leader, both because he had served in previous sessions, and because he has been around the legislature, as an employee and as a member, longer than any other Republican now there.

During the seven months of the session Coakley demonstrated time after time that he knew the myriad rules and precedents of parliaments backward and forward. He was not as able as some in oratory or argument, but the most difficult task in a divided house is maneuvering for advantage. Coakley did it as well as it could be done.

Then last week in a burst of temper he made a break which may yet spell ruin for the administration. Whether his act has been rectified or not by this time, Coakley proved that he has much to learn of politics as it is practiced by the artists.

REVENGE MOTIVE In an impetuous moment Coakley embarrassed the whole administration and gained nothing for himself except the questionable satisfaction of revenge toward the Democrats who had balked at his command.

When the five Democratic senators refused to follow him in voting for the administration's gas tax increase, he hurried over to Phil Nelson, the Progressives' smart and ruthless leader, and made an agreement to kill the Shimek-Goldthorpe election bill, dearly craved by the Democrats who have to grab every chance to gain patronage these days.

It was sheer spite. Republicans gained nothing. Democrats were alienated, and the Progressives, the principal foes of the Republican administration scored a very inexpensive victory.

One of the first requisites of a politician is the ability to take a licking. Coakley showed by his ill-tempered move that he has not yet learned that. Another is the capacity to think deliberately. To plan strategy, to avoid impromptu decisions as much as possible. Because in a fit of anger he made a mistake which he regretted 30 minutes later, Coakley put the whole program of his party in jeopardy.

The floorleader's decision was especially unjustified in view of the fact that had his own party men

STAINS ON TEETH

In some regions where the drinking water contains fluorine in sufficient quantity (less than one part per million) children from six to eighteen years of age show peculiar staining of the teeth—black, brown or yellow, or sometimes a ghastly opaque white spots in the enamel. This may be prevented only by providing drinking water comparatively free from fluorides. No method of removing fluoride from water has as yet been found. The stain cannot be removed, once it develops.

Green stains which are not removed by brushing with soap, ordinary dentifrice, soda, willow charcoal or salt, may be cleared away by brushing with a drop or two of tincture of iodine on the wet brush, followed by aromatic spirits of ammonia on the wet brush.

Mere dark or yellowish discoloration of the teeth is best removed by frequent rinsing of the mouth with weak hydrogen peroxide solution (teaspoonful of standard peroxide with five or six spoonfuls of water.) Or by brushing the teeth from time to time with sodium perborate powder or with one of the sweetened and aromatically flavored preparations of sodium perborate designed as mouthwashes.

The application of the iodine and ammonia as above described may be repeated several days in succession, or as often as twice a week for a child, or every day for an adult.

When tartar deposits discolor the teeth, only the dentist may remove them without risk of injuring the enamel.

There is no objection to the use of wooden toothpicks for keeping the spaces between the teeth free from food detritus—in fact good dentists advise this. Metal toothpicks should not be used.

As a general rule when one or more teeth become darkened to a noticeable degree it is wisest to submit to one's dentist the question of attempting to bleach or brighten them.

A so-called "dead" tooth usually appears darker or more opaque than a normal tooth. Such a tooth is not "dead" but pulpless. It may still serve a useful purpose in the jaw for many years. Some dentists radically condemn pulpless teeth because they are more likely to be infected about the roots than are normal teeth. Time to consider extracting such a tooth when we have definite evidence that the root is infected or the source of a local infection which is accountable for some systemic trouble. Doctors or dentists who urge extraction of a useful or apparently sound tooth on X-ray evidence alone or on the principle that a pulpless tooth may followed his bidding, the administration could have passed the gasoline tax without the Democrats. Coakley accepted the desertion of his own men, and wreaked his revenge on the Democrats who owed nothing to him.

Whatever may be the outcome of the peace negotiations which have been in the last few days, it is apparent that party lines for the remainder of the session will be inextricably scrambled. At least one Progressive has been carrying patronage favor by friendly votes for the administration, and another was busy negotiating over the weekend. Thus the Republican-Democratic coalition, if it is not rebuilt, may be followed by a sort of Republican-Progressive coalition. In any event it appears that Heil will have to barter off some of the jobs which Republicans feel are theirs by right in order to get the senate to approve the legislation to make these jobs. It is a curious state of affairs, certainly.

Marion Wieckert State Champion Dairy Club Girl

Outagamie County 4-H Group Member to Com- pete for National Honors

Miss Marion Wieckert, member of the Wide-Awake-Forward 4-H club, has been selected as the Wisconsin state champion 4-H Holstein club girl, and Andrew E. Voland, Cedarburg, Ozaukee county, as the state champion 4-H club boy by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. The pair will compete for national honors.

The first year Miss Wieckert enrolled in 4-H club work, the club consisted of only members of the Wieckert family under the direction of their father. The next year 13 other boys and girls enrolled in the club. Marion has been an active member of the dairy club for five years and in addition has carried the sewing project for three years and the food project for two years.

For her calf project in 1938 she used the same calf as in 1937 and each year she exhibited at the county fair and in 1938 at the state fair. In dairy projects she has won three first prizes, one second, one fifth and one sixth during her five years in club work. She has also served as president of the club for one year, vice president for one year, and club reporter for one year.

Last Sunday she was selected as the Outagamie county dairy queen and will compete for state honors at the state fair at Milwaukee later this month.

Voland has been enrolled in 4-H club work since 1931. He was president of his club last year and for two years previous served as the club's secretary.

Committee to Get Report on Needed Courthouse Repairs

The courthouse construction committee at the courthouse yesterday discussed the advisability of building a new courthouse at the present time because of low construction costs and the low rate at which money can be borrowed.

The buildings and grounds committee was instructed to report on necessary repairs to the present courthouse building and the special committee will make a study of it at its next meeting.

Modern Priscillas To Have Booth at Junior State Fair

FHA Chapter Selects Mar- tin Conradt as Out- standing Farmer

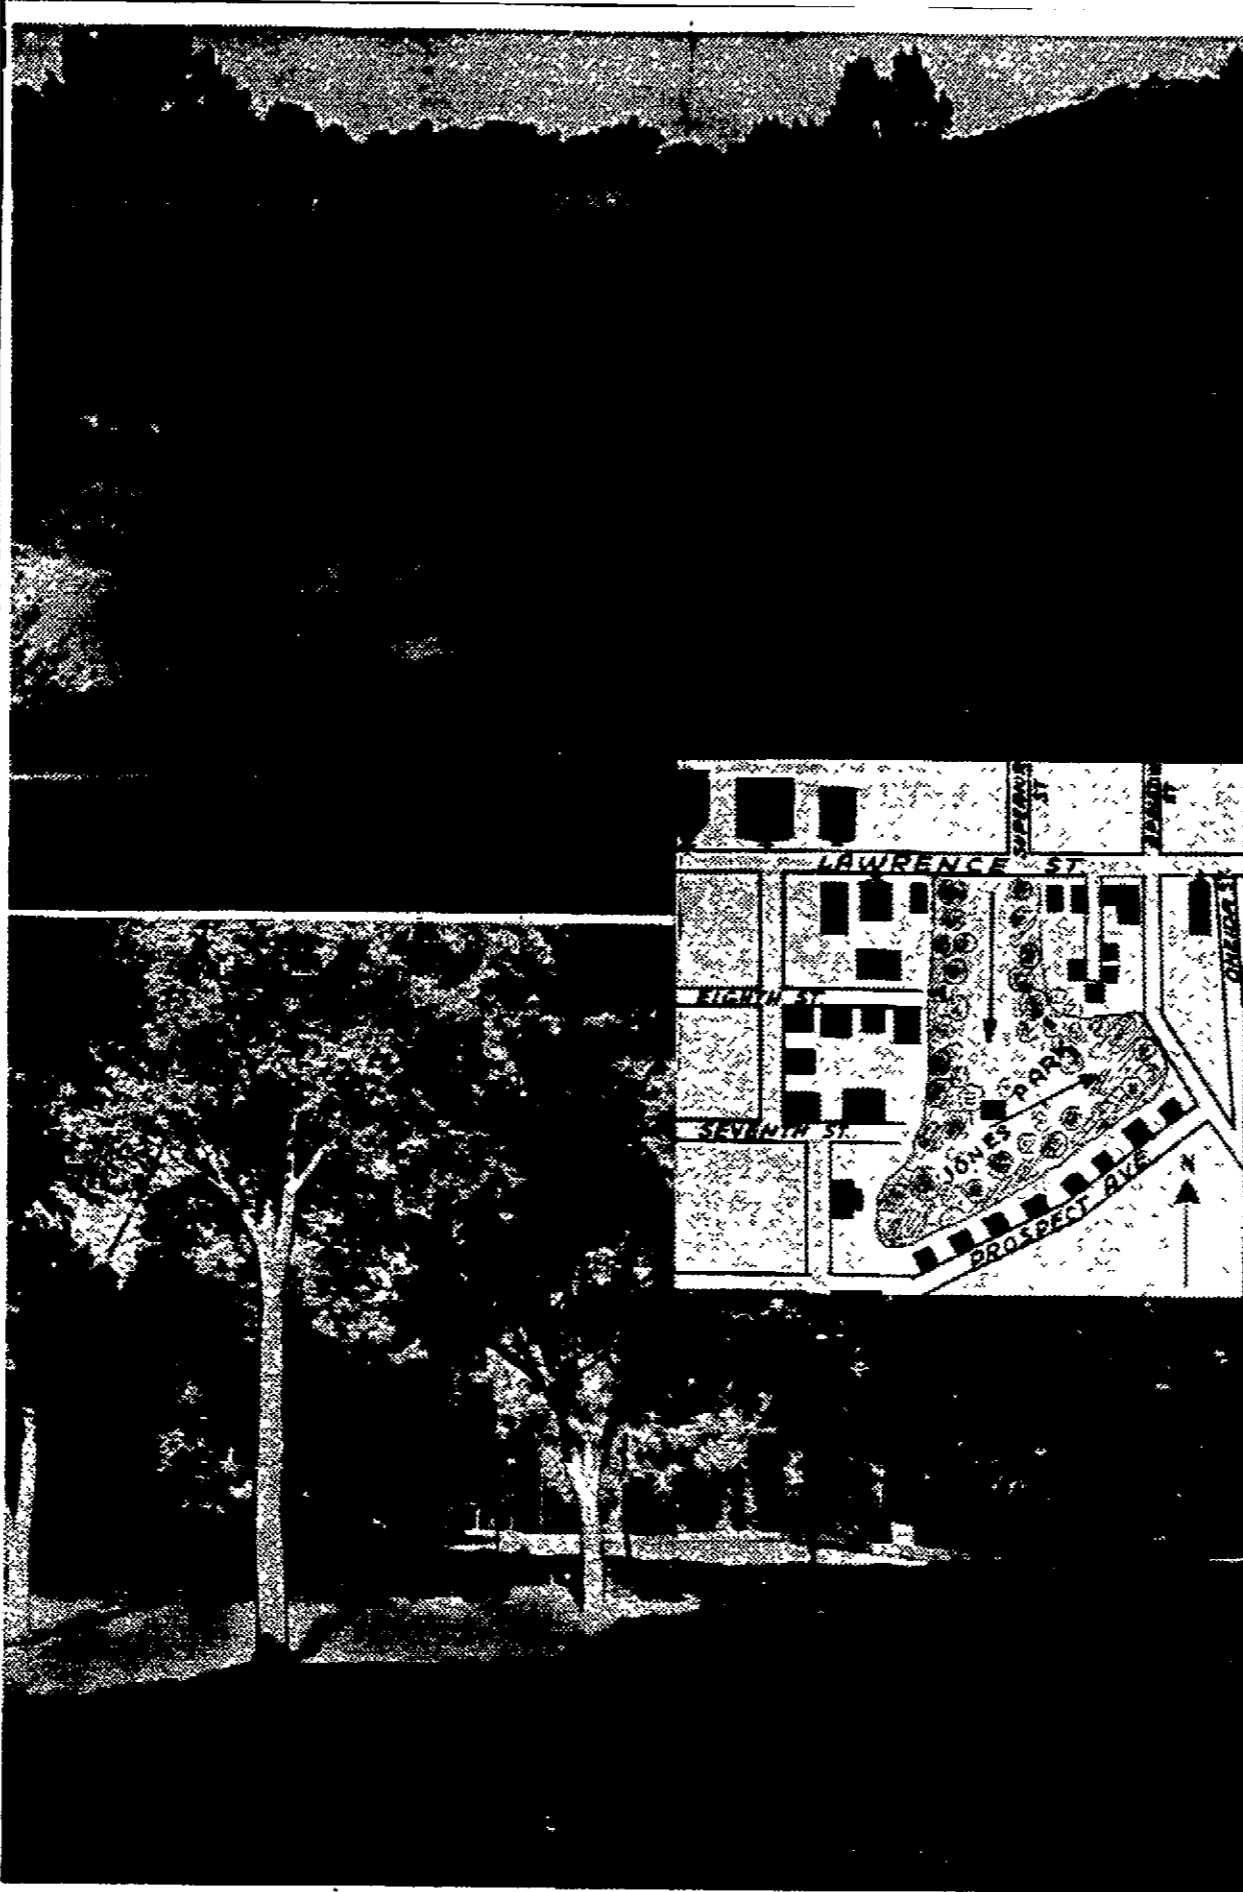

Shiocton—A "mid-summer get-together" was held last week by members of the Modern Priscillas and the Future Farmers of America at the Shiocton High school gymnasium. A marshmallow and wienner roast preceded the short business meetings of the organizations.

Plans were made for the Junior State fair by the Modern Priscillas and Audrey Keenan and Caroline Middleton were named to represent the girls and will conduct the activities at the fair booth throughout the fair week.

The FHA chapter selected Martin Conradt as the outstanding farmer from the community to receive a certificate of recognition at the state fair. He was named on the basis of help given the chapter, agricultural leadership and farming activities.

Plans for making a tour to the state fair and through southern Wisconsin were made for Aug. 25 to 27. The group will meet again Aug. 15.

Following the business meetings the organizations enjoyed a social hour of dancing and playing Chinese checkers and ping-pong.

JONES PARK SITES COULD BE PLACE FOR SWIMMING POOL

Two Sites in Jones Park are Mentioned for Artificial Pool

(This is the second of several articles discussing the sites that have been suggested for a municipal swimming pool, if one ever is built in Appleton. No attempt will be made to compare one with another, or to suggest that one might be better than another. Information concerning assessments, sewer connections, etc., has been obtained from official sources. The purpose of these articles is to acquaint readers with the possible places that pools might be built, with such facts on property assessments, location, near-by properties, distances, sewer connections, etc., as will enable them to form conclusions as to the more desirable places.)

Jones park is among the locations in the city that have been mentioned as possible sites for an artificial swimming pool.

Its record in the history of efforts to promote an artificial pool in Appleton makes its possibility as a site a controversial subject. When Jones park was considered for a pool site a few years ago, a present alderman was one of the leaders in the opposition because the proposed pool would be near St. Joseph school nuns. This proximity was one of the reasons for objections from St. Joseph congregation.

Two places in the park might be selected for a swimming pool, one at the north end of the park and the other in the southern area. The park covers an area of about 54 acres and the ravines are large enough for a good-sized pool.

The area at the north end of the park is about 600 feet long and 200 feet wide and is used for softball in the summer and ice skating in the winter. The southern area is about the same size and is covered in part by a hockey rink in the winter. The ravine is about 40 feet deep and is shut off from surface breezes on all sides. The pictures above show both sites.

The park is in the heart of the city's business section and is about 1,400 feet in a direct line from the Conway hotel, which is about the geographical center of Appleton. A pool built in the northern section of the park would be right in the backyards of several residences, including the St. Joseph convent and only a stone's throw from Prospect avenue on the south. A pool in the southern section would be only a few hundred feet from residences on Prospect avenue but would be 600 or 700 feet from residences on Elm street.

As at Pierce park, a 28-inch sewer passes under the park following the contour of the ravine which would simplify drainage problems. The sewer connects with the interceptor at the river, not far from the park. The parking problem would be a serious one if the pool were placed in Jones park for the streets already are over-crowded in the downtown area. Lawrence street carries a heavy load of traffic which would be dangerous for youngsters using the pool. Pedestrians watching swimmers from Lawrence street would further congest traffic.

The park is approximately 1,000 feet from the Fox river which would make it comparatively easy to pull water from the river if river water were used in the pool. A purification plant with filters would be necessary to re-circulate water through the pool.

Rain to Continue, Weatherman Says

Farmers Cheerful as Showers Drench Parch- ed Crops Today

Showers and cooler temperatures, two things that were evident today, are scheduled for Appleton and vicinity tomorrow by the weatherman.

Farmers of this area hailed happily the rain that started falling in this area early this morning and continued intermittently throughout the day. The mercury, which has surmounted the 80 mark just about every afternoon for a couple weeks, had climbed to only 73 by 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The Milwaukee area, which had its last soaking rain of 1.14 inches two months ago, June 7, was in most need of the moisture. In 10 minutes, starting at 10:05 this morning, rain measuring .53 of an inch fell in that city, compared with .51 of an inch during the entire month of July.

Rain also was falling at Madison, Janesville, La Crosse and Lone Rock. In Racine county, rain brought renewed hope for the cabbage crop, endangered by drought.

Showers were predicted for tonight generally throughout the state. For the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning, the highest mark in the city was 88 degrees, recorded at 2:30 yesterday afternoon, the Wisconsin Michigan Power company reported. The minimum was 67 at 11 o'clock last night.

Oklaheima City, with 97, and Yellowstone, with 34, were the hottest and coldest places respectively in the nation yesterday.

Police Start Drive Against Parking Law Violations in City

Five motorists were fined $1 and costs each for violating the city 60-minute parking law by Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court yesterday afternoon. Pleas of guilty were entered for the motorists who are R. G. Kruckeberg, 616 W. Commercial street; Herman Hopfensperger, 723 N. Locust street; D. E. Eisele, 427 W. College avenue; Linda Mueller, 830 E. Atlantic street; and Henry Welsch, 602 E. Brewster street.

Four other motorists were scheduled to appear in court this afternoon on charges of violating the city 2-hour parking law. Police Chief George T. Fran said today that through use of the new 3-wheel motorcycle the parking laws in the city will be strictly enforced.

Czechs in United States and Elsewhere Working Fervently To Resist Nazi Domination

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
New York—(AP)—Disclosure from Prague that the Czechs have resurrected the secret Mafia and put it into operation against their German rulers in an effort to regain freedom bespeaks another monkey-wrench in the political machinery of central Europe.

The Mafia is the underground organization which played such an important part in making Czech freedom possible at the end of the World war.

In the present instance its purpose is to do as much as it can to nullify the government of the new Nazi protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia. It also is reported to be recruiting soldiers for a Czech legion under command of General Lev Prchal in Poland.

It may have been some possibility that Nazi Fuehrer Hitler had in mind when he declared in his historic sports palace speech in Berlin just before Munich last year—"We do not want any Czechs."

I heard him say that, and there was a finality in his voice. He demanded Sudetenland, with its German population, but he didn't want any Czechs. One almost expected to hear him add that he wasn't going to create any minority problem for the Reich by annexing non-Germanic peoples.

Face Minority Problem
Last March when Germany again intervened in Czechoslovakia, the Nazis did establish a protectorate over the Czechs. The minority problem has followed.

The resistance of the Czechs under the protectorate is being supported by Czechs in other countries, the United States having the largest organization. The Czechs in foreign lands are of three classes: immigrants who were born in the fatherland, political refugees and those who are citizens of the countries where they live but are of Czech descent.

Many of these folk look for leadership to Dr. Eduard Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, who has been living in America but at the moment is in England. Yesterday, speaking at Cambridge university, Benes declared that democracy would be victorious and that "The victory of democracy and freedom in Europe means the liberty of my country."

In taking on this leadership Benes goes back more than 20 years to the work he did with the late Dr. Thomas Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's first president, in establishing the republic. Then as now the American Czech national committee had headquarters in Chicago. Some members of the old committee are on the new one.

Many Czech Societies
There are in the United States 1,600,000 Czechs, many of whom live in or near such centers as Chicago, Cleveland, New York and Pittsburgh. Leaders of the movement for the restoration of Czechoslovakia state that there are Czech societies throughout the country, all reporting to Chicago.

Czechs in the movement here and in other countries are said to be giving financial as well as moral support to their people in the protectorate. It's history repeating itself two decades later.

Former Czechoslovak legations in numerous capitals—notably Washington, Paris, London, Moscow and Warsaw—have declined to give over to the new regime and have remained open to represent a state which no longer exists. The same is true of many consulates in various countries. One of those still open is here in New York. I got acting consul General Karel Hudic on the telephone and asked him if he were still doing business at the old stand.

"We are," he replied dryly, "and we're going to stay. This consulate will continue indefinitely."

Baetz Will Speak at Kiwanis Club Meeting

C. O. Baetz, superintendent of the city sewage disposal plant, will be the speaker at a meeting of the Appleton Kiwanis club Wednesday noon at the Conway hotel. He will discuss "Sewage Disposal in the Fox River Valley."

Baby Born With Exposed Heart; Doctors Puzzled

by hot water bottles and under constant care of a nurse.

Dr. Guillermo del Castillo, the attending physician, said he expected the child to live. Other prominent physicians expressed doubt. The medics also were undecided whether to attempt the operation to place the heart where it belongs.

Dr. Castillo said he thought an operation would be impossible for the present, explaining he feared the thoracic cavity was too undeveloped to receive the heart and that the child could not stand the shock of an operation.

Attracts Crowds
The baby, whose heart-beat and breathing were declared normal, was not born prematurely.

While newsmen watched her today she opened her eyes, squinted, then fell into a sound sleep.

Visitors flocked to the little maternity hospital. Curious Filipinos by scores gathered around and superstitious folk of the Tondo district were attracted by a story that the child's exposed heart was due to the mother's exceptional devotion to the Sacred Heart prior to the birth.

The mother, who was unaware of her daughter's condition, was reported doing well.

Condition of Accident Victim Still Serious

The condition of Joseph Weber, 35, who was injured critically by a taxi Saturday night, still is serious. It was reported at St. Elizabeth hospital today. He was in an accident involving a taxi driven by Ronald Barrett, Neenah, on Prospect avenue. Weber had stepped from one taxi and was crossing the street when the accident with the second taxi occurred.

Miss Ann Bottensek, 52, Medina, who fractured her pelvis and several ribs when the car in which she was riding and a passenger bus collided Saturday, was reported improved today. Mrs. Charles Langman, Medina, who also was injured in the accident was discharged from the hospital yesterday.

Heinemann Fractures Several Ribs in Fall

Judge Fred V. Heinemann is under care of a physician after a fall in which he broke several ribs at Fremont lake Saturday afternoon. Judge Heinemann was stepping from a boat onto a wet floating wharf when he slipped and fell.

Failure to Settle Tax Issue Causes Shortage of Funds

Will be Necessary to Assess Counties to Meet State Costs

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The log-jam in the legislature which has practically stalled the administration's revenue-raising program is already affecting the operation of state functions and is being reflected in curtailed aids to localities. It was learned from official sources at the capitol.

Heads of state departments and commissions yesterday received notification from Governor Hell and the other members of the state emergency board that no emergency board funds would be released for any purpose until assurance had been given by the legislature that the state budget would be balanced by the passage of an adequate revenue bill.

One of the first effects of that decision, it was learned, will be the pro-rating of funds to counties this month for the state's share of the cost of paying aid to dependent children.

Included in the total requests of $100,000 which have already been turned down by the emergency board because of the uncertain prospect of balancing the budget was a request for an allotment to the state pension department to make up a deficiency in state funds available for the counties to pay mother's pensions this month, it was learned on good authority.

The state budget provisions for the purpose were inadequate at the beginning, it was pointed out, but it was expected that some of the deficiency could be met from the $1,500,000 fund allowed to the state emergency board.

Pro-Rating Necessary
The state's obligation for the first month of the fiscal year, July, for dependent children's aids to counties was $140,000. The money available in the budget was only $134,500. Pro-rating, therefore, will be necessary for the first month of the fiscal year.

The state budget allows $1,614,000 a year for children's aids for each of the two years, or $134,500 a month. The fact that the amount is short in July, a mid-summer month probably means that pro-rating will be even more severe next fall and winter, when pension departments resume their winter budgeting schedules, which include allowances for fuel and winter clothing. Moreover, the dependent children's pension rolls have shown a steady increase during many months, and it is likely that not only the cash allowances per case, but the total number of cases will be increased during the biennium.

Some sources estimated, as a result, that there may be a deficiency up to several hundred thousands in state funds for children's aids this year.

Old age pension funds in the budget are sufficient to meet state obligations, at least for the present, state records show. But if the state pension department's estimates on the expected rate of increase are realized, the state will be forced to resort to pro-rating before the end of the present fiscal year, unless the legislature increases the pension funds.

Pessimistic Note
Observers noted a tinge of pessimism in the following announcement sent to state departments by the governor, Senator Otto Mueller and Assemblyman F. Bradley McInyre, the other members of the emergency board:

"The legislature thus far has failed to pass a revenue bill in order that the budget may be balanced or even meet existing appropriations, and until such time that a revenue bill is passed the emergency board must decline any request made."

It appeared today that the administration would be forced to begin anew on the fundamental question of a tax program, following the death of the gasoline tax increase proposal last week.

The administration thus far has just about run the gamut of tax possibilities. General sales taxes, special sales taxes, income taxes, diversion of huge amounts of highway funds, all have had their day. There has been no substantial agreement on any plan. Legislators know only that they derive no pleasure in voting for taxes.

Richard J. Walsh Sees Eye to Eye With Wife Pearl Buck on Books, Manuscripts

This is the third of a series of camera and pen portraits of little-known husbands of well-known women.

BY ELIZABETH INSKIP WYE
New York—(7)—Behind a table piled with manuscripts in a sunny, book-walled office, sits Pearl Buck's publisher and husband, Richard J. Walsh.

Long before Pearl Buck's literary sun rose in the East, Richard Walsh was prominent in publishing circles. Starting as a reporter for the "Boston Herald" after he had been graduated from Harvard, Walsh was promotion manager for the Curtis Publications, and editor of "Collier's"—before becoming president of John Day Co., and editor of "Asia" magazine.

Finds Justification
Always interested in the Orient, he discovered Pearl Buck's "East Wind West Wind" which had been turned down by other publishers for nearly a year. "The Good Earth" followed, in 1930, and Richard Walsh's faith in Pearl Buck was spectacularly justified. Now Pearl Buck, besides being a Nobel prize winner, a novelist, and a magazine writer, is vice-president of John Day, and associate editor of "Asia."

Tanned, gray-haired Walsh seems more interested in talking about his wife, than about himself. His serious face lightens as he describes her work.

Hunts For New Talent
"She reads most of the manuscripts that come in," he says. "One of her major interests is to discover young writers and she'll wade through a great many manuscripts in that hope."

Does their literary judgment agree? So much, says Walsh, that when they both are sure of a writer, they call in outside opinion, just to make sure that thinking alike isn't a handicap.

They think alike on other things, too. Their life is wrapped up in books and publishing. "It's a full life," says Walsh, "a publisher doesn't need a hobby."

They enjoy staying home in their old Pennsylvania house—where Pearl Buck does her writing. They think big cocktail parties and literary teas are a waste of time, compared with seeing people individually. They both feel that they've done their share of traveling.

"Mrs. Walsh feels that she's just getting acquainted with America," says her husband. "If we do any more traveling it will be in this country."

Next week: Waldorf Astor, Lady Astor's husband.

Second Week of World War Was Bad One for Germany, Reports In Appleton Papers Indicated

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN

The second week of the war was a bad one for Germany, if newspaper reports were accurate.

Trapped in the Mediterranean, a German squadron was defeated by French and British squadrons. Three German regiments were said to have been annihilated in Belgium in the short space of 12 hours. Germany lost one of her biggest Zeppelin dirigibles when Belgian gunners shot at it, Germany asked for an armistice to bury 25,000 dead, the British seized a German town in Africa.

A few keen readers realized that the struggle was not as one-sided as it was painted, and on Aug. 7, 1914, the Appleton Daily Post commented editorially that "it is like a better account of themselves than the news thus far would lead us to believe. Most of the dispatches have come through English sources, news likely to be colored by English sympathies or prejudices."

On the front page that day the Post carried its first banner headlines, the sort of heads that newspapers all over the country adopted during the war as news assumed such startling proportions that a headline all the way across the page seemed the only way to give it proper emphasis.

There were two banner headlines that day, and at first glance they seemed contradictory. One announced that "Germans Ask Stay of War to Bury 25,000 Dead" and the other that "City Withers Before German Shell Fire." The story reported that although Germany was making great gains at Liege, Belgium, it was paying many lives for the city, and had asked a 24-hour armistice to bury her dead.

Believing that the request for armistice had been intended only to permit Germans to hurry up two additional corps, the Belgians refused the armistice, the papers reported Saturday, Aug. 8. The German commander, General Von Emmich, was enraged, the story went on, and was ordering his entire army against Liege that day.

Surprising news that week was that Italy, defying Germany, was going back on the triple alliance agreement and had decided to stay neutral. That was on Thursday, Aug. 6. Two days later the Appleton Evening Crescent carried a brief report from London saying the Italian ambassador there had announced publicly that Italy had declared war on Germany.

On the same day Italian officials made the sensational declaration that Austria, Germany's ally, had declined to aid Germany against England.

Prices Go Up
Although the war still seemed remote to most Appleton citizens, reverberations of the conflict were felt here in such matters as the rise of food prices. With the war only 14 weeks old, the retail price of sugar already was going up, and the price of meat was sky-rocketing.

Another local war note was the departure on Aug. 6 of Ernest F. Ruff, brother of Prof. F. C. Ruff of Lawrence college and manager of the Telulah Paper company, to report at the consulate in Chicago previous to leaving for Germany to join the army. A member of the reserve, he had been ordered to join the German colors. He had been a resident of the United States for 15 years and of Appleton for 2 years and had contemplated taking out his first citizenship papers the next month.

On Aug. 7 the papers put some of their war stories on the inside pages to make room on the front page for the story reporting the death of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president of the United States. She had died late the afternoon before.

Book Deals With Family Well-Known In Waupaca County

Royalty—Among the new books is "Pioneer Pops" by Amelia Pope Sutherland, published privately, which deals with a family history that leads from Massachusetts to New York, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

The Pope family is well known here, Mrs. Donald Barrington being one of the descendants, and many other descendants reside in other parts of the county.

Mrs. Sutherland, historian of the Pope family association, is a native of Waupaca county, now residing in the village of Fremont.

Another book she has published is a compliment to "Pioneer Pops," entitled "Old Hemlock" and contains the letters and poems of Elnathan Pope (1788-1865) together with those of his mother, Ruth Hammond Pope, (1767-1857) a direct descendant of William Penn.

One letter written by Elnathan Pope at West Randolph, Cattaraugus, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1853, contains a paragraph of special interest to sections of Waupaca county infested with grasshoppers and is as follows: "Our grass crop was the lightest I have ever seen in this place, and indeed the country has almost been devoured by countless swarms of grasshoppers. Early in the season our fields swarmed with these destructive insects, but they in turn were nearly swept away by a very minute insect which fed upon them. But the farmers had little cause to rejoice at their fall, for they were soon succeeded by still more numerous and voracious swarms. By the last race, gardens have been totally destroyed and some kinds of shrubbery killed to the ground. Even sheep have been partially devoured of their fleeces and skins by these hungry eaters, as though they actually thought all flesh was grass. Indeed there are very few people here who have not felt the grasshopper to be a burden to them."

Kimberly, Cabs Play Tomorrow

Papermakers to Complete Season; J. Van Cuyk Will Pitch

KIMBERLY — Manager Butch Thelin of the Kimberly Papermakers announced today that John Van Cuyk will be the starting pitcher Wednesday evening when Kimberly meets Oshkosh at the local field under the lights in the last game of the season.

The game, originally scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 20, was moved ahead because new sewers will be laid through the park near the Papermakers dugout, beginning Thursday morning. Construction officials agreed that the field would be in shape for the Kimberly-Menasha playoff the latter part of the month.

The game next Sunday with Kaukauna already has been played which gives the Papermakers another bye for Aug. 13. Last week Van Cuyk pitched two hitless innings in the All Star game at Appleton. He also pegged during batting practice for Bill Terry and company of the national league at Chicago recently.

Kimberly holds a win over Oshkosh, 9 to 7, during the first half when it defeated all comers. The two run margin in the first half is no indication that the Papermakers can duplicate as Oshkosh trimmed Little Chute Sunday and is coming to the village all set to give Thelin a defeat.

The Papermakers, who couldn't be stopped during the first round, have four defeats in this half. They took a wallop from Green Bay 14 to 5 and a one-sided defeat from Manitowoc 14 to 1. The two losses were not so bad. Kaukauna won over Kimberly, 10 to 7, and the second round loop leaders, Menasha Falcons, took the Papermakers 7 to 4.

However, Thelin's charges hold a 2-game victory over the Appleton Athletics, one of the best squads in the valley. After Wednesday's game the Kimberly team will get a few good workouts and then will be all set for the championship playoff with Menasha.

The playoff will be a 3-game series with one game being played at Kimberly and one at Menasha. Should a third game be necessary it will be played at the park which had the largest attendance. Wednesday's game will start at 8:15.

Embarrass Bows In Ball Tourney

Loses to Milwaukee Recreation Team by Score of 9 to 5

MILWAUKEE — Close scores marked the majority of games yesterday in the opening round of the fourth annual state amateur baseball tournament at Borchert field.

Harvard of the Rock River league defeated Plover of the Rural league, 6 to 5, despite 12 strikeouts by Danny Young, pitching for Plover, and six Husford errors.

Silverdale of the South Milwaukee Recreation league defeated Embarrass of the Northern Land of Lakes league, 9 to 5.

Belgium of the Rainbow league scored five runs to Hawkins of the Soo Line league, then scored six times in the fourth and eventually won, 7 to 6.

Greenbush, Kettle-Moraine league, won from Kelly Lake of the Marinette-Oconto league, 4 to 0, as G. Knowles pitched five-hit ball.

Brownsville, Fond du Lac County league, defeated Wabeno, Nicolet league, 6 to 2.

Flafield, Waushara County league, won from the Stevens Point Clovers of the Central Amateur loop, 9 to 7.

All games went seven innings.

Yesterday's Stars

Dixie Walker, Dodgers — Singled in tenth to give Brooklyn 7-6 decision over Boston Bees.

Yankee Track Stars Romp Over European Team at White City

BY DEW MIDDLETON — The greatest runner in the world today is Taisio Maki, chest-chested, wiry haired Finn who grew up worshipping the fabulous Nurmi and now finds "I can beat his mark but I feel bad when I do it."

A lot went on at White City stadium in the international track meet yesterday. The American team won the event hands down and made the European team look like bush-league baseball players battling against Red Ruffing. Three British records were cracked and two tied. The United States athletes looked like the class of the world, with one exception—Maki.

He ran as Cunningham used to—coolly, wisely and strongly. No one without a motorcycle is going to lick him in the "big meet" at Helsinki next summer.

He handles English badly, but we found out.

"I have run since I was a boy, I do not know anything else. Always Nurmi was idol. When I found I could approach and beat his marks I was scared. It was like grimacing in the face of your father."

Washington Owner Sees Pro Grid Loop Extended to Coast

Spokane, Wash. — (7) — George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, predicted today the National Professional Football league soon would "stretch from coast to coast."

Marshall arrived from Los Angeles to supervise training of his team at nearby Cheney.

St. Louis and Los Angeles are the two most likely spots for new pro grid teams, he said, explaining "it is apparent the national circuit must expand."

"Some claim St. Louis is a poor sports town," he said, "but Branch Rickey talks differently. He's convinced St. Louis will support high class sports and will go strong for professional football."

"Clark Gable and Bob Taylor have signified their readiness to back a league team in the movie center, and I think Los Angeles would be a grand spot for our teams."

American Tennis Undergoing Big Change in Style

Hell for Leather Game Changing to Softer, More Subtle Variety

BY GAYLE TALBOT — The way of playing tennis in this country appears to be in the act of undergoing a great change — from the slambang, hell-for-leather style that originated here and has been the hallmark of American tennis, to a softer, more subtle variety.

The proof lies in the fact that Bobby Riggs and Frankie Parker are the twin stars and gallery attractions of the eastern grass court championships going on at the Westchester Country club. This is due partly to the knowledge that Bobby and Frankie will represent us in singles against Australia in the Davis cup challenge next month and so are surrounded with a certain glamor at the moment.

Riggs and Parker, the best players Uncle Sam can summon to defend the Davis cup, are a different breed of cats entirely from Johnston, Tilden, Vines and Budge. Neither has a "cannon-ball" service nor blasting ground strokes like those of their great predecessors. Both depend upon finesse, an ability to retrieve any ball they can reach, and dogged perseverance.

They are not as great tennis players as Budge and Vines and the others were. But there might not be any more extra-specials like that for a while, and in the meantime Riggs and Parker are an example to the average player of what can be done with limited equipment. If they should lick the Australians at Merion, as they well might, there will be many a youngster modeling his game after theirs.

It's Penitential — Parker's new forehand, upon close inspection, is about the most peculiar stroke that has come along. It is a sort of shove, delivered with a bent elbow and with absolutely no follow-through. Yet it is effective, and at least an improvement upon his former sliced forehand.

Riggs is his same lazy, careless self, yet Alice Marble, who is here to play in the women's department, predicted yesterday he would win two singles matches against Australia and that Parker would win one.

This is the last big singles tournament upon which Captain Walter Pate can base his selection of the American side, and it would take a great upset to deprive Riggs and Parker of their places. Pate is not entirely satisfied with Parker and Don McNeill's doubles team even though they have just won two important doubles titles. He will not decide finally until after the national doubles championships at Longwood next week. Unless absolutely necessary, he does not wish to saddle Parker with both singles and doubles play.

Today's Guest Star — Tom Meany, N. Y. World-Telegram: "Al Schacht will perform at Ebbsfield tonight and for the first time in years Dodger fans will have no difficulty telling which is Schacht."

Carl Snavely can give you six reasons why his Cornell football team will be better this year, which puts him exactly six up on most of his colleagues. . . . Old Charlie Root says he is not the only Cub player past the 40-year mark—he is just the only one who'll admit it. . . . Mel Hein, their star center, who was given a "sign of resignation" ultimatum, already has left the coast to join the football Giants at Superior, Wis.

Shame On Him — Out on Bloomington (Ill.) the other night a boy named Benzenberg ruined a no-hit game for a guy named Jim Hayes.

Taking the culprit to task, the Bloomington Postgraph said: "He didn't do it standing up there swinging like a man. . . . He did it with a bunt; a deceitful back-alley ruse that gave Mr. Benzenberg a hit but did him no honor."

Sway-backed, moth-eaten, his hit ever marred a pitcher's record. — P. S.—Then the Postgraph put old Benzy in the box score as "B'z'rg."

Petcka May Hurl Against Former Mates Wednesday — Clintonville—it will be a former member of the Clintonville Trunkers leading nine when the Trucks invade Green Bay for a night tilt Wednesday evening. In fact, several former Clintonville Trunkers will be playing for the Green Sox but most notable of those will be Lefty Joe Petcka who will toe the mound. Jim Huffman and Matt Wagner are other former Trunkers men who are playing with Green Bay.

Petcka lives in Clintonville and was a member of the Trucks during the earlier part of the season but a short time after decided to give up baseball and take up golf. However, the old urge kept beckoning him, and so Joe went to Wittenberg and hurled a 2-hit 3 to 0 shutout for Wittenberg. Then a week ago Sunday Green Bay asked Petcka to hurl against Manitowoc and the Sox won 10 to 4. Since then Petcka has been waiting his turn to pitch against his former teammates. Jim Huffman has been with the Sox most of the season and has been playing good ball. His hitting has picked up and so has his fielding. Matt Wagner played his first game with Green Bay Sunday and should see more action Wednesday evening.

John Sargent pitched for Mayville and turned Horicon back without a hit or run. Brother Joe Sargent caught, and hit a home run which decided the game, 1 to 0.

Strong Legs and Recovery of Fast Ball Explain His Pitching Success, Lyons Says

By The AP Feature Service — CHICAGO — Lou Gehrig's playing days are over, Carl Hubbell is on the downgrade, and genial Gabby Hartnett has slowed down, but another old-timer — Ted Lyons of the White Sox — is off on a spurge, enjoying his best season in years.

Just the other day he sidetracked the yipping Yankees for his 10th triumph, against just two defeats. If his luck, and his pitching arm, hold out he's likely to approach the 22 victories he scored back in 1930.

Lyons' comeback has helped the White Sox keep in the American league battle. That is the battle for second place. Manager Jimmy Dykes hopes to crowd out Boston for runner-up honors.

17-Year-Old — For 17 years Ted has been waving his strong right arm for the Chicagoans. He was one of those unusual rookies who hop from college campus direct to the big leagues. Without a sojourn in the minors, Ted came from Baylor university in 1923 to pitch winning ball for Comiskey's Sox.

Good strong legs, he says, have kept him in the big show for so many years.

"I never let them get out of shape," he says. "I'm always on the go. In the winter I'm playing golf or hunting."

TED LYONS
"My arm always feels strong"

A sore arm that followed closely upon his great 1930 season almost knocked Lyons out of baseball. It has impaired his effectiveness for years.

"It doesn't bother me any more, though," he says. "Sometimes my shoulder aches a little on a damp, chilly day."

He won only four games while losing six in 1931. Only three times since then has he been able to win more than 10 games a season. He had won 21 in 1925 and 22 in 1927, leading leagues in victories both years. He has won the booby prize, too, for in 1933 he lost more games than any other pitcher, 21.

Lyons' most notable achievement was a no-hit game against Boston in 1926, the year he won 19 games. He attributes his winning streak this year to better condition.

"I went to Pasadena: a couple of weeks ahead of the regular season last spring and every morning I'd get in a lot of running and throwing."

"I shed quite a bit of weight and my arm was good and strong by the time the season opened," he said.

Pitches Knuckle Ball — He finds that he is seldom tired after pitching a game now. "My arm has always felt good—just like I'd be ready to go again with three days rest."

A knuckle ball is perhaps Lyons' best pitch. But he relied on that delivery. "When that sore arm took the zip off my fast one back in 1931, I began throwing a knuckle ball," he said.

Another reason for his success this season is that he's got his fast ball back.

Strong Legs and Recovery of Fast

Throws Away Diamond Ace In Vital Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

It goes without saying that I like to present good hands in this column, but sometimes a hand can be a little too good—to be true. Experts who are undoubtedly clever in the play of the cards are not supermen, and certain plays, nonchalantly described (after the fact) by this or that bridge writer are just a little too wonderful to be executed in the throes of competition. Such a hand, I fear, is the one shown below, which was included in a recent "par contest" held in England. I hereby admit that the official and winning defense was very beautiful, but I question whether any one would think of the play unless he were forewarned that he was expected to do something sensational.

West, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠ 8 5 3	♥ 10 9 7 5 3	♠ 10 9 7 5 3	♥ 8 5 3
♦ 10 9 7 5 3	♣ 10 9 7 5 3	♦ 10 9 7 5 3	♣ 10 9 7 5 3
♠ 10 9 7 5 3	♥ 8 5 3	♠ 10 9 7 5 3	♥ 8 5 3
♦ 10 9 7 5 3	♣ 10 9 7 5 3	♦ 10 9 7 5 3	♣ 10 9 7 5 3

The bidding recommended by the English committee is:

West	North	East	South
1♣	1♦	1♠	1♥
2♣	2♦	2♠	2♥
3♣	3♦	3♠	3♥
4♣	4♦	4♠	4♥

The committee admitted that this would be rather a difficult bidding for people to go North-South, but it is not so far out of line that we should have any difficulty in accepting it.

In par contests such as this the opening lead, as well as the final contract, is directed by the committee, and in this case West is told to lead the ace and six of spades.

(From that point on all players are on their own.) East wins the second spade trick and, seeing little to be gained by a shift to his partner's club suit, continues with a third round of spades, hoping eventually to get on lead with the diamond queen in order to run the established spades. It is at this point that poor West is called upon to make a stupendous play. He must throw away the diamond ace! No, the huge monkey wrench that this throws into the enemy's machinery. Now declarer cannot run the diamond suit without giving East the lead, nor can he make nine tricks without establishing diamonds. It is, as I have said, a truly beautiful defensive play—if any one makes it! It must be observed that if West fails to discard the diamond ace (even as you or I declare) has an easy guess for his contract. On winning with the spade queen he leads a diamond toward dummy, and he will have to be very obtuse to play the wrong card! All he need do is think of our original club bid to realize that we are marked with the spade and diamond ace, hence his one thought being to keep the ace in it. We duck, he goes right up with the diamond king and continues with the Jack. Now, when we are forced to take our ace, there is no play we can make that will obtain a trick and declarer actually makes his contract with an overtrick.

I have intimated that for West to discard his diamond ace is virtually "double dummy," but I think I had better "backwater a little. Actually, if West is smart enough to think about such a play, it becomes completely logical. On the bidding, declarer is marked with the missing aces, hence the only conceivable card of entry that East can have is the diamond queen. If West holds onto his ace, and East has only one guard for his diamond queen, and if declarer guesses the situation, as he should, the queen cannot become an entry, whereas if West "gets out of the way" it will. Thus I cannot seriously say that the recommended play is absurd or out of the question: I am merely skeptical of the exact sequence of events (the bidding, opening lead, the spade continuation by East) that make this the vital play, and equally skeptical that any flesh-and-bones player would rise to the occasion.

When shipping geraniums cut a branch three to six inches long, and remove lower leaves and put branch in water to cover it halfway up. Do not change water, but add just enough daily to keep it at same level. Roots will soon appear and slips may then be planted in earth.

In selecting color for the flowers you use to decorate your home it is well to remember that blue flowers usually go better in a small room while red flowers should be used in a very large room or to accent certain places in a room.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Going native at the dinner table is a shocking habit and one not condoned by the people we like and admire.

When it comes to telling you how to behave on a vacation, I get a little jittery, for etiquette varies with circumstances. But I do know that the majority of hostesses, who invite you to share their summer fun, are very grateful if you practice the simple rules of good taste while you are a guest.

For instance, just because people go a little more casual in the summertime than during the winter months, there is no excuse for a guest to go to table in slacks or shorts or bathing suits just because she happens to be wearing those when the meal hour is announced. And men who like to bare their chests to sun and wind, should definitely not bear them to their dining companions! It is easy enough to slip into a fresh shirt which makes a man presentable at the table and less offensive to others.

I have known some very formal people to go "native" the minute they get to the country. All well and good. But even the true natives of romantic isles and countries prepare themselves for their eating! They shocked would be at some of our repellent eating habits.

After Bathing
Your bathing suit after bathing should be rinsed and hung to dry. Your feet after bathing should be rinsed and dried before you enter a house to dress. Some summer homes are fortunately provided with dressing rooms or bath houses which eliminates the need for guests to dress in their rooms, but if they are not available you should show your hostess every consideration possible. Remember, too, that lounging mattresses and chairs and swings need to be cared for. They must be brought in before a storm, and at night when they no longer are needed. Help your hostess to do this.

If she has been thoughtful enough to provide outdoor games for your pleasure, take the precaution to put them away once you have enjoyed playing them. Even hostesses with ample help in their homes appreciate the appreciative thoughtful guest.

Fall Into Day's Program
Unless you are invited to "come and do as you please with your time" you should fall into the day's schedule, or ask your hostess if you may be excused from doing this or that if you think the effort too much to make. The guest who is difficult is never invited the second time and unless you have tried to plan for several persons during a week-end, or a week, you have no idea just how difficult a task it is. Enter into the swing of things and show some enthusiasm for the fun planned.

Bring Agreeable Self
Much more enjoyment can be reaped from a holiday if you will bring your most agreeable self along with your holiday wardrobe! Leave your worries at home, and your old living routine. Acclimate yourself to the circumstances in which you find yourself and live the hours happily. The guest who brings a bad attitude is excellent for you. New beauty will be yours when you return to the usual humdrum existence! "Beauty at Small Cost" is an excellent summer leaflet. It tells you how to keep well groomed with the minimum of effort and cost. Free. Enclose a self-addressed envelope bearing a three-cent stamp to receive mailing costs. If you request it. Write me care of this paper.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

You have a circus in your community 12 months of the year, and you can obtain innumerable laughs if you simply observe how the advertisers crack the whip while the American public dutifully jumps through the hoops and even pays for the privilege. Beware of subversive advertising. Good advertising, however, benefits both consumer and manufacturer.

CASE O-114: George and Philip, aged about 10 and 9 respectively, are the oldest of our five children.

"I bought you some new pajamas today," Mrs. Crane informed them.

"You may take your choice. One pair is blue and the other is green," Philip quickly decided on the blue while George was trying to make up his mind.

"Which do you think would make me look older?" George finally asked.

And his mother tactfully decided that he would probably look more mature in the green pair.

High School Circus Antics

All children and teen-agers long for adulthood as the promised land. They want to appear "big." Conversely, they shun all things that intimate babyhood.

In high school the young fellows will eagerly adopt any style or fashion which they think makes them appear older. The cigarette and pipe manufacturers capitalize on this excessive hunger for adulthood on the part of adolescents, and figuratively crack the advertising whip while high schoolers meekly jump through the hoop.

It is amusing to see a callow youth of 17 sucking on a pipe and trying to appear nonchalant. The same is equally true of the girls who choke and splutter in their own cigarette smoke.

Unnatural Appetites

Tobacco and alcohol are unpleasant to our taste at the outset. Some things, however, are natively pleasant, such as sugar. Other foods are in the neutral category on first contact, as eagerly as bread.

Still other substances are decidedly unpleasant at the first contact.

Furnish Child With Idea When He Plays With Blocks

BY ANGELO PATRI

We give blocks to the children to amuse themselves with, and usually they seem to work well. Most children, especially the little boys, love to build. But there is a catch in this as in all set schemes for child rearing. Along with the blocks must go creative imagination or the blocks will soon be discarded.

A block is a bit of dead wood until it is touched with the magic of the child's imagination. Then it becomes anything or everything, according to the image in the child's mind. Now all children have some creative imagination. Every child has a moment when a stick is a prancing steed, a swing a fairy ship, a scooter a magic carpet that carries them far and beyond. But the time comes when imagination must be stimulated, must have a fresh start, and that is where mothers and teachers come in. It is theirs to supply the stimulus that starts a new idea in the child's mind. Once that is started the child goes ahead happily on his own. This is the reason that underlies many a box of fine blocks that lie unheeded on the toy shelf.

Give the little child, who is building, a story to build on, if he seems to be lagging. The story of Three Little Pigs makes a fine starting place. The fables suggest many more. Don't be direct and authoritative about this. Don't mention the building, but tell the story and the child will make his own deduction. His creative imagination will begin work.

This sort of imagination is what feeds the desire to build and skill for work. The work that is worth while, that holds beauty, interest, success for the worker must be supported by this element. When creative imagination is lacking in a job that job falls flat on its face. The worker fails in creation and his spirit droops.

It is important that this quality of mind be cultivated in the early days. When a child first begins to play his imagination is keen. It is easy for him then to use it, develop it and make it a force in his thinking and behavior. But he usually needs the support and stimulus of suggestion, leadership, encouragement and praise.

It is not enough to give a child a pile of blocks, or a wagon, or a set of mechanical toys and say, "Now go play." One must see that there is a creative idea at work in the play. Good playmates are in another and the combined power valuable here. One child stimulates

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

Imperial Angel Foods

What is more delicately appetizing for summer than Angel Food, baked in a tube pan and served in all its glory of golden brown crust or with a dainty frosting.

The ideal Angel Food of melt-in-mouth goodness is one of the easiest cakes to make once you know how to do it. Follow directions carefully and acquire with Angel Food light touch. Once this is done, there are numerous variations of varying the baking and serving to make delicious dessert cakes for any occasion. For example try the Angel Cream Torte.

If you are one of the many women who wonder how they may utilize the egg yolks left from making an Angel Food, you will find that this recipe for Yellow Angel Food is excellent.

Feetless Angel Food Cake

1 1/2 cups egg whites 1 cup sifted cake flour
1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
1/2 teaspoon cream 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cups sugar

Beat egg whites with flat whip.

Tobacco and alcohol, quinine and very acid or hot substances belong in this group.

We must force ourselves to sample them. And the reason we are willing to put up with the unpleasant taste is because of some remote goal we aspire to attain, such as our juvenile worship of adulthood.

Young people go through the painful initiation to alcohol or tobacco simply because they want to appear grown up. They think sophistication is a mark of adulthood and they believe it stands for smoking and drinking.

Slaves To Advertising

Advertising is a great boon to modern civilization, but at the same time it can exert a detrimental influence if the aims of its sponsors are only 30 pieces of silver.

Women are now smoking cigarettes simply because the manufacturers wanted a new market for their product, so they cleverly popularized the use of tobacco by our American girls.

The aim was solely to increase profits. Tobacco has both mental as well as physical injurious effects and is an unnecessary drain on the pocketbook of the average family. Alcohol is ever less commendable.

But both are being pushed by tremendous financial backing with the sole incentive being that which motivated Judas Iscariot. Oh, the manufacturers will rationalize and tell the public they are doing a noble deed in furnishing a market for millions of bushels of rye and barley or tons of tobacco leaf, but the munitions makers can also rationalize beautifully.

Their lack of a sense of humor is pathetic. To read their recent beautiful propaganda leaflets, one would imagine them to be the backbone of democracy and the very pillars of decency. It is interesting how men can lose their sense of perspective and paint white wings on Judas Iscariot.

But that is human nature, and the function of this column is to portray human nature, good as well as bad.

Girls Should Be Told About Habits That Annoy Escorts

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I have been going with a young girl of 15 who is very nice and of whom I am very fond, but she has some little habits that grate upon me. I am sure she could easily break herself of these if her attention was called to them. Do you think it will be proper for me to tell her when she does something that is not just what she should do? I know lots of boys who give up girls that they like just because the girls have habits that get upon their nerves. What do you think about this? PAUL.

Answer: I think you would be doing a great missionary work, Paul, if you would undertake to improve the habits of many of the young girls we see all about us. They certainly need some one to teach them manners and grammar, what to wear and how to generally conduct themselves. There is nobody who could so effectively impart this information as the boy friend with whom they are trying to make a hit.

You do not state along just what lines you plan to carry out your reformation, but I trust you will begin by impressing upon the young lady that she should do her beautifying at home and not in public places. Every time I go into a restaurant I am shocked at seeing women combing their hair and making up their faces at the table. While I am not particularly, I certainly do object to dandruff in my soup and having my entree flavored with lipstick.

Tell her that dressing rooms are provided for the private rites of the toilet, and that whether a woman's complexion is the gift of God or came from the corner drug store is a secret that should be kept between her and her mirror.

Another habit that I hope you will also correct in your girl friend is that of doing her petting where all can see and deride. Don't let her make a laughing stock of you by hanging on to you when you walk along as if she were afraid that if she took her hands off of you for a minute you would escape. You have no idea how much like a dog on a leash a man looks when his girl has him in tow. Don't let her flop over on your shoulder in the movies or hold your hand. And let her know firmly, but unmistakably, that first time she puts her arms around you when you are driving you will take her home and drop her at the door.

Then you might teach her to sort of soft-pedal herself, as it were. Not to screech at the top of her voice, not to make herself conspicuous and, above all, not to try to be the life of the party. Few women have a sense of humor, and when a girl tries to be funny the most she achieves is being common and vulgar. A soft, gentle voice and a quiet manner will take a girl a lot farther than being a cut-up.

Then, of course, you might suggest to her that, while a man like to be seen out with a girl who is prettily dressed, he doesn't want to step out with one who has on freak clothes and looks like a figure of fun. Men are conservative in taste, as you can see by their own clothes, and they don't fall for hair-dos that look like hooters' nests. And, of course, it might be necessary for you to drop a few gentle hints about your girl's table manners. Many a girl has lost her beau by gorging her soup and holding her knife and fork like agricultural implements. And many another girl—but the list of helpful hints that you can drop to girls who need them is endless.

The only difficulty is—will the girls receive your well-meant efforts to improve them in the spirit in which it is meant? Most girls are so satisfied with themselves that they don't realize how much they need reforming.

Dear Dorothy Dix—When I was very young it was necessary for me to leave home because of my mother, and I have been away from home for more than fifteen years. When I needed a mother's affection she hated me because I am supposed to have taken after my father's people. I could overlook the fact that she had no sense of decency and abso-

In reality, you know all of her fine sentiments and know nothing. She cares no more for you now than when she abandoned you as a child. She is getting old and she wants somebody to take her in and nurse her and put up with her whims. She expects to make you do it by appealing to your sense of duty as a daughter.

Dear Miss Dix—I have been jilted by the man to whom I was engaged. Shall I tell people that I have been pushed aside for another woman? I am so miserable. I want to die. I can't eat or sleep and don't want to see any one? What should I do? JESS.

Answer: Keep silent. Go around as much as possible and don't waste a single tear on the man who forsook you. He isn't worth it.

WEARING BRIDE'S CLOTHES

Dear Mrs. Post: I believe you have said that it does not seem suitable to wear bride's clothes (white and a veil) when being married at a civil service. In my case, I have never been married before, but the groom has and as my church does not recognize his divorce, I have to be married outside of the church. We thought we would have a judge or a justice of the peace come to my house to marry us there, and wondered in this event if I might wear bride's clothes.

Answer: Yes, of course you may. It is not the fact of being married by a magistrate that makes the wearing of the traditional white dress and veil improper. It is merely that in a public building, which is in no way associated with either ecclesiastical or social events, full bridal attire would attract unpleasant, conspicuous attention. To wear white and a veil in a private house, or anywhere that can be considered a suitable background, would be quite all right.

Advice to the Young

Dear Mrs. Post: When a man takes a girl to the movies and there is no show to show them to their seats, which one should go down the aisle first?

Answer: They go down the aisle together, usually, and whichever sees vacant seats first says, "There are seats in there. Are they all right?" And if the other says "Yes," then the man of course lets the girl take her seat first.

While He Pays the Check

Dear Mrs. Post: When I am having dinner in a restaurant with a man, where am I supposed to stand to wait for him while he pays the check?

Answer: You just walk slowly towards the door and wait, exactly as you do when he goes to the box office to buy theatre tickets.

Dining in a Young Man's Apartment

Dear Mrs. Post: My best girl friend and I see a good deal of brothers who are our same age. These men are living away from their home, working here and there, and I have been going out to movies and to dances with them. We both have invited them once or twice to our houses for Sunday evening supper. Now they would like to have us come to their apartment to dinner. They have no maid—just some one who comes in mornings to clean up. But one of the boys loves to cook, and he intends to make our dinner. Mother is against the idea and says it will not look right for the two of us to go there unchaperoned. We are all past twenty-four. Will you discuss this situation in your column. Answer: This is one of those problems that is really not discussible. From a standpoint of complete safety as well as from a standpoint of criticism by others, it is an un-thinkable proposition. On the other hand, it is true that in certain communities little comments would be caused, and under circumstances where no particular interest whatever is felt by either the girls for the boys or the boys for the girls it might be (apart from risk, of criticism) a perfectly commonplace thing to do. But if they like each other very much, it is certainly not a wise thing to do. And if neighbors are likely to gossip, it is a very stupid thing to do.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects, to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Behavior in Public." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Mrs. Post in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

BOTTLE TREES

Among the strange trees of Queensland, Australia, is one known as the bottle tree. If you view it from a short distance, the trunk looks like a huge bottle. The trunk bulges out in the middle, and this gives it the bottle shape. The tree grows to a height of from 40 to 55 feet. Sometimes the largest part of the trunk is 12 or 13 feet wide.

A bottle tree

The bottle tree is green the year around. It has leaves shaped something like those of chestnut trees. Through its soft, spongy wood, a very sweet sap flows. We are told that most of the Australian bush have saved themselves from dying of hunger or thirst by eating the "syrup" found in bottle trees.

Among the other trees of Australia are the ironbark, the turpentine, the silky oak and the blackwood. The flowering trees include the tulip tree, the fire tree and the flame tree, all of which have orange or red blossoms.

The ironbark tree supplies some of the strongest wood in the world. This wood has been widely used in building ocean vessels, also for wooden bridges. It "wears like iron."

Related to the ironbark are many giant trees of the eucalyptus family. There are more than 200 kinds of these trees, among them the blue gum, the cedar gum, the peppermint tree, the bloodwoods and the stringybarks.

Eucalyptus trees differ a great deal in height, some kinds rising less than 30 feet when full grown. Other kinds tower high in the air. There have been reports of trees reaching heights as great as 400 feet, but proof has not been found for any of that size.

The tallest tree in Australia, so far as certain record goes, seems to be one not far from the city of Melbourne. It is 326 feet high, which means it rises about the same distance above the ground as a 30-story building.

Eucalyptus trees are natives only of Australia and of Tasmania, an island close to Australia. They have been planted, however, in southern Europe, and in southern parts of the United States, chiefly in California and Florida.

When a blue gum is about 25 years old, it can be cut for saw timber, but if it is left standing it will keep growing higher and larger. Blue gums make fine shade trees, and blossom with pretty white flowers.

FOUR BLIND DATES

By Edwin Rutt

ter on everything he put in his mouth. That big boy from California, Bill Steele, he looked like a grand chap, though she confessed to some bafflement at his choice of dinner companions. She was prepared to admit, however, that the party gained definitely by the inclusion of the East brothers. The East brothers were delightfully naive. The dictation of the East brothers was spicy and racy, redolent of cheap vaudeville houses and late hours in tank town railway stations.

"Liking it?" whispered Tacks, under cover of the din around the table. She flashed him one of her second-rate smiles. After all, she and Mr. Adams were only in a state of truce.

"It's better than I expected," she admitted. "Well, that's something, anyhow. Mind if I make a speech?" "Oh, good heavens, are you going to talk some more? You ought to go on a lecture tour."

Tacks picked up a spoon and rapped sharply on a priceless glass. "Meeting will please come to order."

"Why?" demanded Morris East. He was having an elegant time being disorderly. "Morris," said Horace, "be quiet." Tacks rose to his feet.

"My friends," he began professionally. "I must tell you a story which may explain to you three charming ladies and to the visiting firemen over there"—he indicated the East brothers—"just why you are here. If..."

"Hey, Horace," interrupted Morris East, "what's he talking about?" "Shut up," snapped Horace. "Listen and you'll learn."

"Once upon a time," said Tacks doggedly, "there were four boring gentlemen playing a very boring game of bridge. In the course of this boring game, one of these gentlemen had a brilliant idea. Briefly, it was suggested by the positions at the bridge table, North, South, East and West. The idea was, roughly, that the man in, say, the West position should take the Manhattan telephone directory, select from it a girl named West, use his ingenuity to make her acquaintance and bring her to this dinner tonight, under pain of forfeiting one thousand dollars. I note with satisfaction that the gentleman who occupied the West position did his stuff nobly."

Jumbo bowed. "You follow the modus operandi of the game, do you not?" went on Tacks. "Gentlemen in the other positions were constrained to do likewise, selecting Misses North, South and East. It would be obvious to a blind man that Mr. Harkness and myself, being in the south and north positions respectively, proceeded with the most charming results. At the beginning, however, we struck a snag when we came to the east position, held by my good friend, Bill Steele. Mr. Steele, peering into the telephone directory, found it notable for a lack of eligible women of the name of East."

"Tell the Birds"

"I knew a Maggie East once," said Morris East. She was a good-looking. She didn't have no phone, though."

"Hold your tongue, Morris," said Horace.

"Mr. Steele's loss, I'm sure," said Tacks. "To resume, after considerable wrangling the committee allowed Mr. Steele to regard the producing of one of what we supposed were two or more East brothers who were listed in the phone book. Mr. Steele, it appears, was able to induce both brothers to be with us tonight. Well, ladies and gentlemen, that's a rotten speech. But I thought some of you might want to know what it is all about."

"But what was the point of it all?" asked Dorothy South, mystified. "I can't see what you boys stood to gain by it." Miss South's was a practical mind. Where gain was not involved, she refused to play ball.

"As I said," Tacks explained, "we were hopelessly bored. This game gave us something interesting to do. We jumped at it. And, speaking for myself, I found it a most entertaining pastime, replete with excitement and—er—thrills." He looked at Packy whose eyes went down. "And I regret, most exceedingly, that the game ends tonight."

"Hear, hear," said Van Harkness, pounding the table with a knife. "Since each one was successful in getting his — his — er — assignment to agree to be present," said Tacks, "no forfeit money will be paid into the bank. I'm sure I'll speak for Messrs. Harkness, Steele and Cutler as well as myself when I say that we all had a lot of fun out of the idea. And, if in having our fun, we inconvenienced any of you, we hope that tonight's party will make up for it. I thank you."

He sat down amid applause. "Now if you're quite finished," said Jumbo, who had been championing the bit, "I..."
